Local horse racks up blue at Penn National

BY SHEILA MILLER

HARRISBURG — This ar's Pennsylvania ional Horse Show wraps today with $10,000 Grand x De Penn National. This ale concludes a nine-day ent packed with com- ition between some of the tion's finest horses and ers.

A number of local uestrians will be coming me with numerous ribbons om this prestigious show. inging home a blue ribbon the Amateur Five-Gaited iddle Horse class is Jean amsay, Lancaster.

Aboard her 7-year-old American Saddlebred gelding, Grand Larceny, Jean rode to the top of her class, out-showing a field of 15 outstanding competitors on Thursday evening.

This is not the first win for Ramsay's horse, called Rufus. He was pinned the champion American Saddlebred 5-Gaited Horse in two other states, Ohio and New Jersey. And, he also was tagged champion at the recent Fall Show held at Quentin, Lancaster County.

Ramsay said she has been riding horses for 30 years — and she emphatically stated she's always been aboard American Saddlebreds.

Currently in her stable at Windridge Farm, Jean has two of her favorite breed of horses — Grand Larceny, and an 8-year-old pleasure mare, Hazel Gemini.

Ramsay, who works as a secretary in Lancaster General Hospital's Durg and Alcohol Clinic, said she is on the show road from April through November. The last show for her this year is the November 4-9 show at Madison Square Gardens in New York City. She mentioned she is quite excited about going to this show because she is one out of 35 of the nation's top horses and riders selected to compete.

In the Thursday afternoon show, Ramsay rode another local horse to third place honors in the ESHBA American Saddlebred Three-Gaited Pleasure Horse Class. She was astride A Lovely Decision, a 6-year-old mare owned by Melanie Lipensky of Lebanon.

Milk plan draft in final stages

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

HARRISBURG — The itial draft of Pennylvania's proposed milk arketing promotional rogram is expected to be eady for distribution during he coming week.

"The draft is in its final reparation and is being eviewed by department fficials," according to ames Sumner, Director, ureau of Markets, State epartment of Agriculture. The draft will be istributed to represen- tives of various co-ops, ndependent producers and tatewide farm organizations who met late last month as an informal committee to begin work on the proposed program.

Following receipt of the draft, the different groups will review the various proposals in preparation for a second meeting of the informal committee. This second meeting, at which groups will offer comments on the program and consider any additions, deletions or revisions, is expected to be held in the first week of November.

Several co-ops have been in contact with the PDA since the first committee meeting to amplify their positions on the proposed program, Sumner said. Their positions have not appreciably changed from those expressed at the first meeting held on Sepetmber 30.

Following the completion of a final draft, the PDA would give notice of a public hearing on the proposed program.

The actual referendum vote among producers is not expected to be held until about late-January of 1981, with the final tally of votes not being made until approximately March.

Carter mushroom tariff surprises area growers

BY CURT HARLER

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Jimmy Carter's decision last week to impose stronger tariffs on imported mushrooms has caught farmers by surprise.

While a number of farm groups sought relief from foreign imports for mushroom growers, most had asked for import quotas. The stepped-up tariffs caught most producers by surprise.

Tariffs currently are 13 percent of the sale price of mushrooms. They will increase to 33 percent next year, decreasing to 28 percent and then 23 percent in the following two years.

Carter rejected quotas. The tariffs apply to mushrooms canned, frozen or in jars. Fresh or dried mushrooms are not included.

The actual base tariff of 3.2 cents remains.

As of November 1, the current 10 percent ad valorum tax, imposed on the invoice value of product, will jump to 30 percent plus the base 3.2 cents. The ad valorum tax drops to 25 percent the next year and 20 percent the last year of the tariff.

Most farmers and farmer groups, used to thinking in terms of pounds of mushrooms and quotas were taken back by the tariff idea.

No one was able to say exactly what the increased tariff would to do import volume. While the tariff represents a significant increase over the existing tariff, there is no assurance that a 20 percent boost in tariff rates will mean a 20 percent drop in foreign mushrooms entering the country—or any drop in imports at all.

Pennsylvania Farmers Union noted the tariff was unrelated to the domestic cost of production or any parity index in mushrooms.

Also disturbing to PFU was the idea of having all revenues from the tariff go to the U.S. Treasury and none to helping domestic producers.

But Farmers Union said it was glad the President did something, pointing out President Carter was not obliged to do anything at all.

Farmers Union said it is difficult to know what effect the tariff will have, adding the group hopes the administration imposed the tariff knowning what the outcome would be.

Pennsylvania Farmers' Association was not so optimistic.

"We don't think it will solve the problem. If they have a lot of mushrooms over there why not pay some

Humans squawk for better barn conditions

Animal rights movement disrupts barnyard

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — Farmers already must deal with a small army of state and federal inspectors sticking their heads into their bulk tanks and milking machines.

But the day may not be too far away when inspectors will be more concerned about healthy conditions for animals than for people.

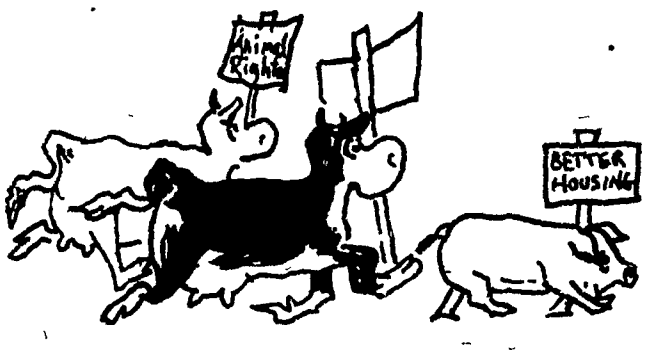
There is a new movement in the U.S. now known as the Animal Rights Movement.

Though at first it was the basis for a lot of good jokes — the best being the one about chickens marching around with picket signs — it no longer can be described as something that "may" cause trouble for poultry and livestock industries in the U.S.

Instead it is a growing problem for which producers need to find answers.

One such gathering took place last Monday night at the Holiday Inn in Lancaster. Ninety-one poultry servicemen and farmers grouped to discuss the critical influence such supporters of animal rights may have.

Dr. Dale Schwindaman, senior staff veterinarian of Veterinary Service, USDA in Hyattsville, Md., spoke to the group on exactly what it is the supporters of animal welfare want to change.



What concerns welfarists most is the intensive confinement production of farm animals. Crowding livestock and poultry in pens leads to unnatural behavior and to distress for these animals, they claim.

The movement is centered in the Institute for the Study of Animal Problems, in Washington D.C., and is directed by Dr. Michael Fox, the head of the Institute, which is a division of the Humane Society of the United States.

This organization is against many agricultural practices. The first few, which are of great concern to the poultry producers, are commercial egg production cage management systems, feeding and watering procedures, broiler production units, debeaking and poor ventilation.

Other practices the organization would like to see changed are: tail docking, total confinement and farrowing pens for hogs, veal calf husbandry and feed lot finishing of beef

Going that extra mile for better milk yields.

When your cows need feed, they need feed. They need it right away. And in the right combination. That's why the Pennfield delivery fleet packs so much versatility for its size. Compartmentalized trucks deliver feed from any of our four plants where more than 22,000 tons of grain and other ingredients are kept on hand... ready for mixing at all times. By going this extra mile to deliver the right feed at the right time we can assure you that the Pennfield Computerized Total Ration Service is helping you to better milk yields. Here's how the service works: 1. We collect samples of your forage. 2. Then we evaluate the quality of your forages. We determine the total digestible nutrients. The fiber content. The protein content. The amount of carbohydrates. 3. The computer quickly spots any nutrients lacking in the forage. For your milking cows. And for your dry cows. It immediately points out the overfeeding of nutrients. Underfeeding, too. Both, of course, may be different at different times of the year. And the printout will tell you what you need. And when. 4. Your Penn Pro Professional advises you on the quantity and type of nutrients that should be added, to balance your total feeding program to your cows nutritional requirements.

Report supplied by USDA

Closing prices on Slaughter Steers and Heifers were .50-75 lower. Cows were 1.00-1.50 lower and bulls weak to 1.00 lower

Four Day Receipts	11,600
Week Ago	11,500
Year Ago	10,500

Prices on Slaughter Steers and Heifers were forced downward on the initial session in reflection of a sharply breaking carcass trade, and most interests were not aggressive for maximum numbers in view of the poor movement of the finished product. While midweek demand improved somewhat, only a small portion of the early decline was regained. Buyers were still selective as the price differential between yield grade 3 and yield grade 4 carcasses held at 11.00-12.00 per cwt. The overall finish of the Steer and Heifer supply was rather attractive with a fairly liberal percentage Choice and a modest volume Choice and Prime. Steers made up approximately 37 pct and Heifers 33 pct. Cows comprised 6 pct and Feeders 23 pct.

STEERS: At midweek, load Choice and Prime predominantly 3 1164 lbs. 68.25, three loads Choice 3 1125-1175 lbs. 68.00. Two loads Choice and Prime large percentage 4 1203 lbs. 65.50. Infrared Brooders For Hogs

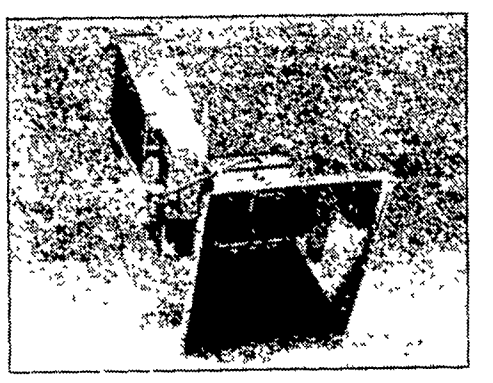
Sunnypig 3 for a ambient heating of a farrowing pen or 20 to 30 weaner pigs

Quality You Can Count On



Sunnypig 1 to heat a litter of piglets or a pen of 10 to 12 young pigs.

SBM has been making Brooders for more than 20 years. Nearly 100,000 Brooders are sold every year.

Sunnypigs are made of stainless steel. Their three-level radiating surface (a patented combination of ceramics, nickel chromium mesh and directional fins) is an efficient generator of radiant heat. They come equipped with a support consisting of five-foot chains, a flame safety device, a very effective primary air filter (patented) and a replacement filter. The filter should be cleaned at regular intervals, a little work that will save you a lot.

Lancaster Farming says...

The three percent solution

The solution to feeding 220 million Americans and almost as many people overseas rests on three percent of the U.S. population.

Three percent: that's 6.6 million farmers feeding the rest of us.

It was only a few years ago the figure was six percent. And it was well into double digits before the second world war.

Secretaries of agriculture, co-op leaders, and farm writers seem to take some sort of perverse pride in informing farmers that they are in danger of becoming extinct.

It is looked upon as a point of pride that farmers are being forced from the land at an ever increasing rate. It is supposed to be an honor that a small group can work its tail off to feed the rest of the country; and it's an advancement in society that fewer acres of farmland await the plow each spring.

Often batted about is the figure that Americans pay only 16 percent of their salaries for food. It's an old and out-of-date figure, but a good example of another one of those statistics that was supposed to make the three percent feel good about working hard.

Today the cost of feeding a family is higher. Even at that time, the figures included only the relatively well-to-do. The poor then and now pay upwards of 50 percent of their income for food.

Still, Americans as a whole eat better and cheaper than people anywhere else.

If you're an 'average' farmer 52 years of age, the hungry world population has doubled in your lifetime.

It means more people to feed — especially more poor people for whom food is a major part of the weekly budget.

The world's supply of good farm land is going fast. A quick review of man's history shows he does little more than search for food and places to produce it.

Mankind has identified and now uses most of the productive land in the world. Look at the United States: land brought into row crop production in the past decade lacks the quality of traditional farm land, has not yielded as well, is more prone to soil erosion. Most will be returned to grasslands.

So it is on a worldwide scale. What saved American agriculture is the vast amount of research in breeding, mechanization, transportation, preservation of produce, and labor saving devices that have made it possible for the nation to exist with only three percent of its labor force working in the fields.

An array of packaging, processing, and retailing people must be added to the base of three percent who feed the nation. All are supporting the three percent core which does the bulk of the work but gets only a fraction of the pay.

There will come the time when a three percent solution to feeding the country is not enough.

Three percent is a weak solution indeed.

Three percent is a thin margin against hunger and economic disaster. Investment today is needed to protect the lot of that three percent who feed us.

There can be little pride that a nation places such a burden on so few people and gives so little in return.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

A "MERE PRESIDENT"

October 26, 1980

Background Scripture:
Nehemiah 8 through 9.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 21:33-43.

It will not be long after you read this column that this nation will go to the polls to elect a President and a congress, as well as state and local officials. In all likelihood, emotions will be running high and the intensity and desperation with which the candidates will be conducting their campaigns is likely to deceive some people into assuming that it is the Messiah, not a mere president that we will be electing.

A "MERE PRESIDENT"

I am not demeaning the office of our President one bit in speaking of a "mere President". What I am doing is trying to set this election in perspective, for whether we elect President Carter, Governor Reagan or Congressman Anderson, what we will be setting in motion is another political administration, not the Kingdom of God!

It is an important election, but the fulfillment of our hopes is not riding on it. It will not solve our basic problems. In all due respect to these three men, not one of them can turn this country around. If there is to be a national salvation, it will have to come, not through the political process, but through the consciences of millions of Americans. Only then can the political process take us anywhere.

We have let the election process become twisted and distorted so that all of our energy and interest are invested in electing "the right persons." When the election is over - even before the inauguration - we assume we have done our bit and quickly return to our own interests (something we never got very far from even during the election). Saving the country has now become the job of the "Right Man" whom we have elected. But it doesn't take very long until "Mr. Right" becomes "Mr. Wrong" and we respond by beginning to look ahead to 1984 and the next circus.

TELL US, NEHEMIAH!

This is what happened in Israel. They had put their hopes in kings, alliances, armies, displomacy and priests. They ignored the warnings of the prophets to "Repent!" If they had the right king they didn't need to repent. But they never had "the right king."

So the people had a terrible price: war, defeat, captivity, the destruction of all they had held precious. Later, when a remnant returned to the Holy City, they were dishearted with what they found. Sensing a need to return to something their fathers had forsaken, they asked Nehemiah to read to them the forgotten commandments of God. He did and for the first time in generations, the people of Israel heard what God was saying and realized how far they had strayed, how grievously they had sinned.

Yet, through all this hardship they saw that God alone had remained faithful to them and kept his covenant. And if they were to rise up once again as God's people, this would be the first requirement: to return to the Lord and renew the forgotten covenant.

Unless that comes first, nothing else really matters.

NOW IS THE TIME

TO DO FORAGE TESTING

The winter feeding period is usually the most expensive time of the year for dairy and cattle feeders. With feed grain prices on the increase, every producer should make an effort to get maximum nutrients from the roughages and not from the grains. This means the operator should know exactly how good, or how poor, their forages are in the way of feed nutrients. Many producers can save money by having their forages tested through the Penn State Testing Services. With high quality forages, less grains and proteins need to be purchased. We suggest that more producers get their silage and hay tested and request a feeding recommendation.

TO CULL DAIRY COWS

With milk supplies mounting and the market agencies being stressed to handle the quantity this fall, it might to a good time to cull out a few of the older, or the lower producers. Beef prices are rather favorable for dairy beef at this time. In many cases a few less of the lower producers, and more attention and feed to the higher producers in a herd, will result in the same total income. Also, milk surpluses can easily lead to lower prices per pound for all producers. As we face the winter months, I'd suggest that dairymen give this culling idea some consideration. To get "bigger" does not always mean getting "better".

TO UTILIZE FARM RECORDS

The 1980 cropping season is about over; soon it will be time to summarize your farm accounts and be reporting to the Internal Revenue Service. In addition to the need of good farm records for tax reporting purposes, I'd like to suggest these farm records be used for future farm planning, and in making major farm decision. When time permits, as the outside work gets completed this fall, it is good management to spend some time in your office and do some "pencil pushing" regarding the most profitable parts to your farming business. Your records of success or failure of the various enterprises are the best guide to future expansion, or termination.

TO PROVIDE SALT AND MINERALS

All types of livestock need certain amounts of salt and minerals for efficient utilization and digestion of feed nutrients. The amounts of each will vary between the animals. Therefore, it might be the best practice to put a minimum amount in the grain ration, but also, have free-choice salt and minerals available. These free-choice feeders should be protected from the weather and give every animal a chance to consume what they want. In the way of salt it is suggested producers use loose salt rather than block salt; with some animals and block salt, the tongue will get sore before the animal gets sufficient salt. Animals with ample salt and minerals will usually drink larger amounts of water and therefore, be more efficient milk or meat producers.

Hearing to be held on cherry program

HARRISBURG — A public hearing is scheduled to discuss proposed amendments to the Red Cherry Marketing Program of 1974. The hearing has been set for 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday, November 12, in Room 103 of the Agriculture Building in Harrisburg.

Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell said the Pennsylvania Red Cherry Growers Association had requested a referendum on a proposed amendment which would increase the assessment rate under the state's Red Cherry Marketing Program from $2 per ton to $3.50 per ton on processed red cherries.

The referendum will likely be scheduled for January 1981.

"The national red cherry crop has been short for three of the last four years," Hallowell said. "As a result, retail outlets, bakeries and institutional buyers have cut back on their purchases of red cherries. The Red Cherry Growers Association has requested the increased assessment as a means to help market this year's crop and to regain some of these markets."

He said, Pennsylvania ranks third in the nation in the production of red cherries. But growers' income and the promotional monies of the Red Cherry Marketing Program have been shrunk by inflation. The Red Cherry Growers Association felt that an increase in assessment rates would help fight off the affects of inflation on their promotional funds while boosting demand for red cherries."

The Red Cherry Growers Association feels Pennsylvania growers should be keeping up with other major production states in promotional efforts. Pennsylvania has one of the lowest assessment rates for red cherry promotion in the nation. New York currently assesses growers $5.50 per ton while Michigan collects $3.50 per ton.

The Pennsylvania Red Cherry Marketing Program's estimated income for 1980 is $3600. Of this, $2300 is budgeted to National Red Cherry Institute for national promotion and $1000 to Pennsylvania Red Cherry Growers Association for in-state promotion. Pennsylvania's share is used mainly to support promotional activities by the State Red Cherry Queen.

The Red Cherry Marketing Program, which was renewed for five years in a 1979 referendum, applies to all red cherry growers who deliver their cherries to commercial processors.

Jersey accepts 36

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Thirty-six bulls have been accepted into the American Jersey Cattle Club's Young Sire Program since its adoption in January, 1979, and more are being nominated daily as the high plus Jersey bulls of the future.

These young bulls are sired by the top bulls of the breed. Their sires have an average Predicted Difference (PD) of +1258M, +43F, way above the average PD of all active AI sires. Even the average PD of the maternal grandsires of these young bulls is above the average of the AI sires, with a PD of +1,086M, +40F.

In an effort to encourage sampling of top quality young bulls, the AJCC accepts a young bull with a Pedigree Index or Estimated Transmitting Ability equal to or greater than the average PD of all active AI bulls in any one of the following categories: PDM, PDF of PD$. The current active AI average is +1,015M, +34F, +$115.

The young bulls accepted must also be no older than nine months of age and have less than 12.5 percent inheritance from a declared abnormality carrier. The dams must score Very Good or better.

Further information and applications for the Young Sire Program may be obtaine by writing The American Jersey Club, P.O. Box 27310, Columbus, Ohio 43227.

The farmer's financial Almanac.

When it comes to providing dependable farming information, you can't beat the people in the Agri-Business Department of American Bank. They go right to work for you, giving advice and coming up with a bumper crop of good ideas that help farmers. Each has a farming background, so when they come out to see you, they speak your language.

Since the turn of the century, American Bank has had a special kinship with farmers and their land. Over the years we've kept pace with their needs with loans for livestock, new equipment, construction, and remodeling. As times and needs changed, we helped with lines of credit and operating capital. Today, we're still maintaining that pace with additional financial services like trusts, retirement and estate planning, and savings and checking accounts.

We're proud of the way our farming background has helped. Together, American Bankers and local farmers have been right as rain. And together, our future looks even brighter. If you'd like to see our ideas at work, just call (215) 375-5993.

Sludge brings farmers, gov't people together

BY SHEILA MILLER

HERSHEY — It looked like a basket stuffed with apples and oranges as close to 100 farmers and government personnel filled a log cabin meeting room to the seams, here at Camp Milton on Wednesday.

It was strictly standing room only as the interested participants in a sewage sludge forum listened intently as local experts told about the how's, why's and wherefore's of using the waste on agricultural land.

Penn State's Raymond F. Shipp, an associate professor of agronomy and co-author of Special Circular 255, Land Application of Sewage Sludge for Crop Production, recommended to farmers interested in applying sludge to their land that they "know what's in the sludge."

He pointed out that "sludge is as effective as livestock manure and chemical fertilizers and should be recognized as an alternative resource for growing crops." However, he stressed the fact that sludge is not a complete fertilizer being low in potassium, with only a somewhat higher analysis for nitrogen and phosphorus.

Another reason farmers should be aware of what is in the sludge is because of potentially harmful heavy metal content. He referred to Special Circular 255 and noted the recommended lifetime application rates for zinc, copper, chromium, lead, nickel, and cadmium.

These rates, he said, comply with the regulations of state and federal environmental agencies. If sludge is found to contain a harmful amount of metals, there is "no refinement procedure to treat sludge that's cost effective to get it to meet the Department of Environmental Resources standards."

Representatives from the state's environmental agency, DER, were on hand to pass along the bureaucratic reasons for where, when, how much and how long sludge can be used for agricultural purposes.

They pointed out the rules governing land application of sludge are not new. The original regulations were spelled out in Act 241, and were recently incorporated in this year's Act 97. The DER representative clarified the fact that the rules have not changed - and Chapter 75 regulations are still the guidelines for the use of sewage sludge and septic tank waste.

In order for sludge to be applied to farm land, an application must be submitted to DER and a permit must be issued by the department. It was pointed out that usually the application is submitted by the local sewage plant or municipality.

In the several months it takes for a permit to be issued, DER makes sure the application site complies with all the criteria.

Soil profiles are checked to make sure the sludge will be incorporated without contaminating groundwater or flowing off bedrock. The land on which the sludge is to be applied cannot exceed a 12 percent slope unless the cropland is to be no-tilled. The pH of the soil must be 6.5 or higher. And the application of the sludge cannot create vector or insect problems.

When the sludge is being applied, the state governs how close it can be spread to a number of areas. They spell out that no sludge can be applied within 100 feet of streams, 300 feet of wells or water sources, 25 feet of bedrock outcrop, 50 feet of property lines, or 300 feet from an occupied dwelling.

And after the sludge is applied, detailed records must be maintained for at least two years after the last application. The soils are required to be sampled annually, and the DER representatives recommended more frequent tests.

The DER representatives noted that conservation practices are carefully scrutinized when reviewing sludge applications. "We look at surface water management; and if we see any erosion gullies, we think twice about issuing a permit or put severe restrictions on it."

For farmers interested in spreading sludge on pasture, the DER representatives said it was doubtful. They pointed out present regulations restrict grazing for 2 months after the sludge is applied. And in most cases, pastures are on land that is off-drained so it wouldn't meet the standards anyway.

First hand experience in coordinating a sludge application program with local farmers was presented by William Horst of the City of Lancaster's Sewage Operations.

He told the group the sludge at the Lancaster plant is analyzed every six months. With a limit of 2.06 tons per acre application rate (maximum due to zinc content), the sludge will provide 54 pounds of nitrogen per acre along with 100 pounds of phosphorus per acre, Horst explained.

The Lancaster Plant, he said, produces 100 dry tons of sludge each month. Over the past summer, a pilot program was started with several farmers where sludge application was tested. Now the plant is hoping to cooperate with farmers within an 8 mile radius for the disposal of the waste.

With a truck called the Big A, Horst said the plant has the potential of applying 80 tons of sludge in an hour. The truck, equipped with flotation tires, injects the sludge at a depth of between 12 inches and 18 inches and handles the sludge as a semi-liquid.

Nearly 100 farmers and government personnel looked on as the Big A sliced sludge into a Milton Hershey farm field on Wednesday during a sludge seminar.

The group of farmers and government officials then went out to a neighboring Milton Hershey farm to watch a sludge injection demonstration. They watched as the largest model injector of its type cut the sludge into the ground with a roar and a belching of diesel smoke.

At annual meeting

Dairylea president predicts co-op upswing

KIAMESHA LAKE, NY - The president of Dairylea Cooperative told delegates to Dairylea's 61st annual meeting they can anticipate a future of strengthened performance and achievement of goals.

The Cooperative, at its annual meeting last week, installed new management for its operations, financial and marketing activities about six months ago following the development of a modern membership equity program last year.

Clyde Rutherford, completing his second one-year term as president of the cooperative, said in his annual report, "Dairylea is definitely moving ahead with speed and direction. We have at least three new products under test. We have a realistic financial plan. We have a Consumer Products Division headed by people who have proved they know how to put products into the marketplace successfully-and profitably. We have joint venture projects developing with several companies and cooperatives.

"We are now using marketing goals for all products in every sales location. We have an incentive plan to reward those who contribute to the profitability of Dairylea. We can and will get out of any operation which doesn't either serve a necessary membership function or isn't profitable.

"We can and will change the entire structure and strategy of Dairylea without a backward glance if it is necessary or desirable to restore our strength and financial viability," Rutherford said.

"And we will do it without sacrificing the underlying principle upon which the Dairymen's League was founded in 1907-namely, to establish and maintain a profitable market for the milk of our farmer-members. Other worthy goals led to the formation of the League. I believe, however, that the restoration of Dairylea as the strongest, best-financed, most successful milk marketing organization in the Northeast will ultimately serve the original Dairymen's League goals.

"The price we get for our farm milk...admittedly improved in the past two years...is sitting on a rather fragile foundation. It's a foundation made up of equal parts supply-demand, international politics, and federal bureaucracy. A case could be made that the least motivating part of the pricing complex is supply-demand. It's there, and it plays a role, but how do you isolate it from the politics?" he asked.

"The dairy marketing organizations which plan for the future, who set up their milk supply, their marketing program, their product mix, their joint ventures, their total utilization of milk in a way that reduces government participation to a fractional level will survive. Those who keep on doing business in the same old way will disappear," he said.

"Farmer-members of cooperatives in the Northeast have become so accustomed to crisis living that they have not expanded their thinking to take a look at the direction in which their co-op is headed. This is a world of change.

"In five years, perhaps less, our industry, particularly here in the Northeast, is going to be a lot different than it is today," he predicted.

"We should all work at the job of holding down the rate of inflation by using money sensibly, but it is foolish and useless to let the concept of constantly rising prices paralyze our ingenuity and undermine our success. Inflation is with us and it will continue to be with us very likely for the rest of our lives.

"Dairy farmers keep hearing that the production-consumption inbalance is cyclical and we will work our way out of the present heavy production pattern because the average production per cow just can't increase that much more.

"This kind of living with wrong assumptions is what has kept the blinders on the milk industry for so long while our competitors passed us by.

"When we look at our cooperatives, our markets, our management, and our future in the light of what is happening rather than what has happened...we must come to different decisions. Dairylea is doing that. It is tough work, but it is getting done," Rutherford said.

"We cannot and will not be a 'disposer' of milk. We cannot accept as fact that the public will continue to want even as much fluid, whole milk, as they now consume. We cannot sit by and let the competition do all the innovating, leaving us with the leftover, shrinking market.

"There are better times ahead for our organization and its members. Membership is stabilizing. Our milk supply is adequate, our schedule of deductions is headed downward, our marketing program is headed upward, our cash position is improving, the bank is pleased with our progress, 'Operation Grand Slam,' our plan for the immediate future is working.

"Our short-range sales blitz has been effective in moving products, our inventories are down, our unused property is being moved, our sales training and incentive programs are in place, morale among members and employees is steadily improving," Rutherford said.

"The next ten years could be the best ones of our lives," he said.

Dairylea, with over $408,000,000 in net sales during the fiscal year ending last March 31, 1980, has operations in seven states and markets nearly 42 billion quarts of milk a year for its farmer-members.

Bootmaker daughter tops ABS Americana

DE FOREST, Wis. — Erinwood Bootmaker Val, VG-87, consigned by Younger, Blackburn and Hodges of Yorktown Heights, New York, was the top selling cow at the 2nd Americana Sale held recently at Arlington, Wisconsin. This Paclamar Bootmaker daughter, out of a high-producing EX-90 Citation R Maple dam, was purchased by Kaiser Bros. of Edgar, Wisconsin, for $31,500.

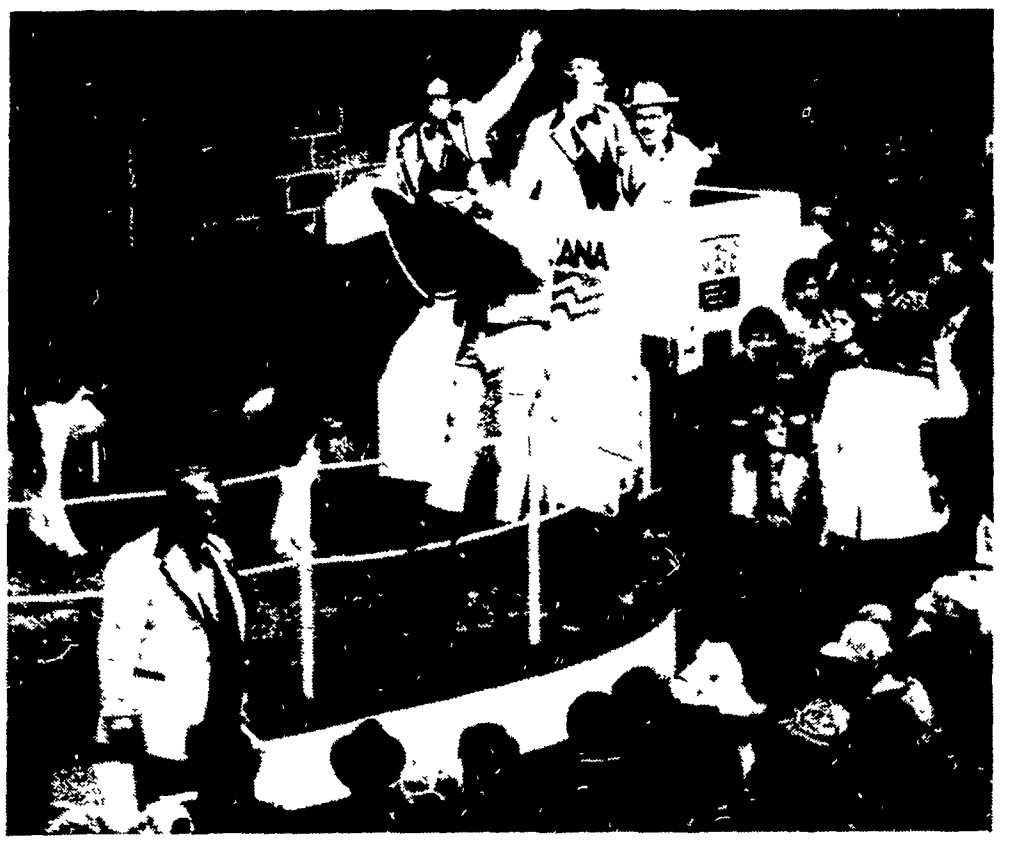
The high selling heifer was Winter Place Miss Americana-ET, bringing $22,000. She was also sired by Paclamar Bootmaker and out of an EX-94 Astronaut with records to over 22,000 pounds of milk. Miss Americana, consigned by Charles J. Auger of Winslow, Maine, was purchased by Milliehoe West Partners of Turlock, California.

The sale, sponsored by American Breeder Service, featured 57, ABS-sired, purebred Holstein cows and heifers that averaged $6,739 each.

Richard Smith, chairman of the sale committee said, "We are very pleased with the consistancy of the sale as the average price indicates we should be. The 28 young heifers averaged $6603.00...we think this speaks well for tomorrow."

Buyers from 12 states and Ecuador made purchases.

American Breeders Service supplies frozen semen to cattlemen throughout the United States and 65 foreign countries. Headquartered in DeForest, Wisconsin, ABS is a division of W.R. Grace & Co.



At the recent ABS Americana Sale, Kaiser Bros. of Edgar, Wisconsin, purchased the top-selling cow, Erinwood Bootmaker Val, VG-87, at $31,500. The Americana featured 57 ABS-sired, purebred Holstein cows and heifers, representing a total of 39 ABS sires. They sold for a $6739 average.

Triplet heifers

Bouncing Binky, Bunky & Bonky born to local Guernsey

Lancaster County dairyman, Tom Kirk, poses with triplet Guernseys, Binky, Bunky and Bonky. (You guess which is which.)

By Susan Kauffman
Staff Correspondent

PEACH BOTTOM — Tom Kirk, a young dairyman from southern Lancaster County, is the surprised and very happy owner of triplet heifer calves born to one of his Guernseys several weeks ago.

At the time of the accompanying photo, the calves were three weeks old. Tom says they are all "spunky and full of ambition." All three were walking within three hours after birth he said.

Tom recalled the momentous morning in late September, when he brought the mother and her two heifers, he supposed then to be just twins, from the dry cow barn into the maternity and calf pen barn. It was about six in the morning when he brought them to the pen.

Expecting some difficulty with cleaning for the cow since she had the twins, Tom tried to insert a pill into the cow's uterus and came "smack into another calf," as Tom explained. Approximately three hours after the other two had been born, Tom delivered, to his surprise, another live heifer.

All three were fairly equal in size at birth weighing in at around 35 pounds apiece, Tom said. At the end of the third week, Tom guessed their weights at 40 to 50 pounds each. One calf had a cold which Tom treated with Tylan for five days. She maintained a good appetite even during the cold. The other two thrived and continued to grow at a steady rate.

A normal newborn Guernsey heifer might weigh 60 to 70 pounds, Tom explained. After three weeks, the triplets are reaching the normal newborn weight.

When asked about the dam, Tom said she was one of his 4-H and FFA animals. This was her third calving. She had had no history of multiple births for several generations, Tom said. The mother, Cedar Fringe Bert, is an average to small Guernsey according to Tom. He had not noticed her being unusually big before calving.

Five days after delivering the triplets, Bert was operated on for a twisted stomach. She was also treated for an uteran infection, but despite her ordeal, Tom said she would probably record 50 to 60 pounds of milk for the DHIA supervisor that week, the third since the multiple birth.

Tom plans to raise Binky, Bunky and Bonky, as he calls them for the time being, and put them into the milking herd, which he and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Kirk, own. They milk 130 head and this year so far they have had five sets of twins in addition to the triplets.

To us, agriculture is still the backbone of America.

At Hamilton Bank one of our primary objectives is to serve, and help preserve, the family farm.

We still believe that agriculture is the backbone of America, and the family farm is the cornerstone of agriculture in our area.

That's why we have developed a complete range of financing, credit, trust and estate services – all designed to help you – the family farmer – fulfill your obligations.

With the value of farm production in our area increasing every year, the need for capital continues to rise along with it We are here, and will continue to help you meet that need.

When we work together, through a relationship of mutual trust, we can all continue to move ahead. We can continue to keep agriculture strong.

Agway sales group views latest swine research

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LEXINGTON, IL. — Agway swine feed salesmen got a first-hand look at the latest in swine research and facilities at the FS Research Farm of Growmark, Inc. located just north of Bloomington, Il. last week.

Research at the farm is centered on health and feeding programs for both swine and feedlot cattle. The study facility, which is patterned as closely as possible after farmer-owned commercial operations, is part of the network of Cooperative Research Farms.

Among studies the salesmen took a look at were the early weaning of pigs at three weeks, solar-heated buildings with a system of side doors which can be opened or closed according to the weather, programs to stimulate gilts to come into heat, substituting the feeding of sunflower meal for soybean meal and the feeding of stillage from a corn-ethanol operation to feedlot cattle.

Agway swine feed salesmen participating in the tour were John Harner, Richard Myer, Francis Strause and Ray Wallace. Also taking part were Robert Weller and Henry Zajac, Farm Enterprise Service Managers, and Joseph Heeg, from [illegible] office.

Host for the tour of the swine research facility was Dr. Gary G. Pearl, veterinarian, who directs operations at the farm as Feed Research and Development and Technical Services Manager for Growmark, Inc. Growmark is the parent corporation for FS Services, Inc. and Illinois Grain, Inc.,which operates in the three-state area of Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Also, taking part in the tour was Charles Taylor, manager of the farm.

A farrow-to-finishing operation, the research farm maintains a herd of about 135 to 140 breeding females. Only boars are brought into the herd. The females are three-way crosses of Hampshire-Yorkshire-Chester Whites with purebred boars rotated from the three breeds.

Pigs are weaned at three weeks and then bred in the first heat after conception. Eight farrowing groups are maintained, with 36 crates in the farrowing house.

In January, 1979, a new breeding-gestation building was opened on the farm. It is totally environmentally controlled, heating and air conditioning.

A clear roof system, with no collectors, permits the solar heating of attic air, which is pulled down into the building during the winter and vented to the outside during the summer.

"We estimate that we're saving about 15 to 20 percent in heating costs," Dr. Pearl said.

The building, a modified open-front, also features a system of side doors, which can be opened or closed according to the weather.

Everything except replacement gilts are confined on slatted floors. Gilts are kept outside until a two-stage selection is made at six and seven months. The final selection is made on the basis of feet, legs, conformation and carcass information from litter mates. About one-fourth of each farrowing group includes the gilts.

A research trial was conducted on vaccination for rhinitis, which showed a good response to use of the vaccine. Sows are vaccinated three weeks before farrowing. Animals are submitted regularly for slaughter inspection to determine any turbinate damage. No obvious signs of rhinitis have been seen in the pigs.

Another study compared two iron injections in pigs on the third and 17th day as compared to one oral application.

"We found that not all pigs uniformly consume the oral iron," Dr. Pearl said.

The naval cords are sprayed with iodine at three days, along with clipping needle teeth and tails. Waiting until the third day helps to reduce stress on the small pigs, according to Dr. Pearl.

Worming is also still done despite the confinement.

For breeding, the farm uses a module crate and pen system – five crates to a boar pen. Between each sow module is one for gilts.

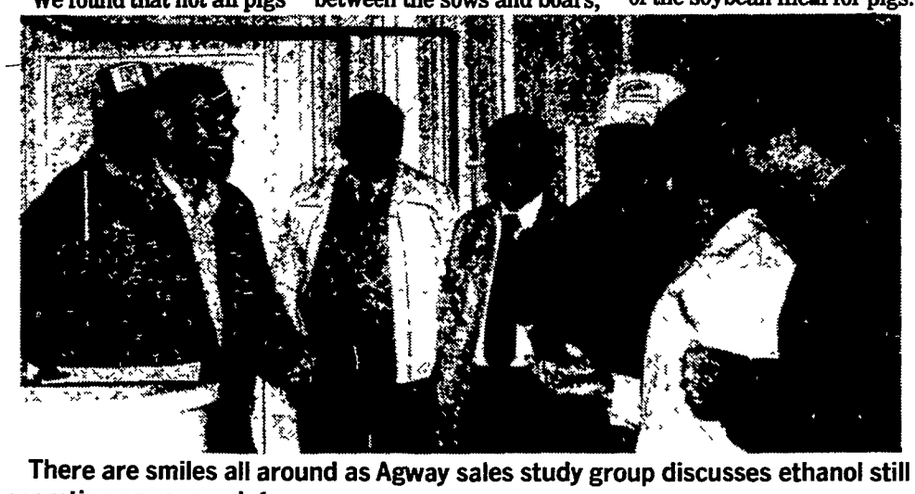
"We've found that one of the problems of confinement is getting the gilts stimulated to come into heat," Dr. Pearl said. "Anything that can be done, such as putting the gilts between the sows and boars, will help. Even rotating the gilts around the breeding area is helpful – anything to shake them up."

Gilts that don't come into heat their first time are culled.

Sow reproductive records show 727 animals with 10.9 pigs farrowed per litter, birth weight of 2.96 lbs., 79.1 percent weaning rate and weaned weight of 12.23 lbs.

"We wean at three weeks," according to Dr. Pearl, "and find less competition among the younger pigs. One area of future research will be a feeding program concentrating on that first week of weaning when the pig is going from liquid to solid food."

Another research trial is trying the substitution of sunflower meal for a portion of the soybean meal for pigs.



There are smiles all around as Agway sales study group discusses ethanol still operation on research farm.

Two new boars, in foreground, just purchased for breeding studies are viewed by group.

Three different treatments include substituting a quarter, half and three-quarters of the meal.

"We're early in these tests, but it appears that the sunflower meal has some effect on helping to control scours," Dr. Pearl said.

"It appears to be better digested by the small pigs."

Some tests have also been conducted on the feeding of high fat diets. There appears to be a six to seven percent improvement in the utilization of feed with the high fat, but the cost per pound of gain is increased.

The research farm also has a small operating still, making 100-proof ethanol from corn. Two diesel tractors on the farm have been converted for its use.

Stillage, with only some of the water drained away, is being fed to one group of feeder cattle. Their performance will be compared to a control group, also on a corn silage ration. Ten pounds of the stillage is being fed per day.

Thus far, use of the stillage is permitting about a 25 percent reduction in the protein supplement normally fed.

And, it was dry in Illinois this year, too. Normally, the farm yields 185 busels of corn, but this year it dropped to 106. Average for the state is about 80 bushels this year.

Broiler placements up

HARRISBURG — Placements of broiler chicks in the Commonwealth during the week ending October 11 were 2,164,000, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

The placements were 14 percent above the corresponding week a year earlier, but three percent below the previous week. Average placements during the past nine weeks were ten percent above a year earlier.

Placements in the 21 key poultry producing states were 71,263,000, three percent below the previous week and two percent below the same week a year ago.

Broiler-fryers slaughtered in Pennsylvania under federal inspection during the week ending October 1 totaled 1,813,000, with an average liveweight of 4.02 pounds.

Fall harvest continues in high gear

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania's fall harvest was in full gear during the week ending October 20, with six days rated suitable for farm fieldwork. Field activities included harvest of corn, soybeans, vegetables, fruits, potatoes and silage corn.

Other farm activities included baling hay, filling silos, seeding wheat and barley, plowing and general farm chores.

Silage corn harvest was virtually complete, compared to 76 percent harvested a year earlier. Throughout the Commonwealth, corn for grain was 53 percent mature, and 42 percent harvested. Last year, grain corn stood at 65 percent mature and 13 percent harvested. A five-year average for grain corn shows 69 percent mature and 19 percent harvested.

Potato harvest, at 93 percent complete, was ahead of the 87 percent complete a year ago. Northern potato growers reported harvest at 93 percent, central growers reported harvest at 92 percent and southern potato growers reported harvest at 95 percent complete.

Soybean harvest stood at 41 percent, compared to only 12 percent at this time last year. Soybean harvest was reported at 29 percent complete in the north, 54 percent complete in central counties and 34 percent complete in the south.

Apple and grape harvest continued across the state.

Pennsylvania fall plowing was 89 percent complete compared to 90 percent complete last year. Completion rates for fall plowing were 90 percent in the north, 95 percent in central counties and 84 percent in the south.

Fall planting of barley was virtually complete, on a par with last year's progress. Wheat planting increased to 85 percent, about the same as last year's 84 percent planted at this time. Wheat planting was at 95 percent in the north, 87 percent in central counties and 76 percent in the south.

Fourth cutting of alfalfa advanced to 71 percent complete, behind last year's 77 percent. The quality of hay made during the week was rated good to fair throughout the commonwealth.

Feed from pastures was rated as below average to average across the state, with a few reporters reporting above average feed. Pastures in the north were rated as 65 percent below average, 29 percent average and six percent above average. Pasture feed in central and southern areas were rated at 87 and 83 percent below average, respectively.

Soils were rated mostly short to adequate statewide, with northern operators rating soils 67 percent short to 33 percent adequate. Central and southern farmers rated their soils at 100 percent and 92 percent short, respectively.

All fuels were rated as adequate to surplus across the state.

Adams honors 4-H leader

Adams County 4-H Agent Jerry Tyson presented Teresa Murren with an award for 35 years as a 4-H leader.

Waltemyer to receive Jersey scholarship

COLLEGEVILLE — Cynthia Ann Waltemyer, daughter of Earl and Phoebe Waltemyer, Walebe Farms, Inc., Collegeville, has been selected as a recipient of a Jack C. Nesbit Memorial Scholarship awarded by The American Jersey Cattle Club, Columbus, Ohio.

The scholarship will be presented to Miss Waltemyer at the All American Junior Banquet and Fun Fest in Louisville, Ky., on November 8, in conjunction with the All American Jersey Show and Sale.

Cindy was also named third place winner in the National Jersey Youth Achievement Contest this year.

Cindy is a sophomore honor student at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University where she was selected as the outstanding freshman of the Dairy Science Club. She plans a career in large animal veterinary medicine.

Showing Jerseys as 4-H projects and judging has kept Cindy busy. She placed first in the 1976 Pennsylvania 4-H Judging Contest.

Cindy is building a herd of high quality cows which has included such cows as Zev of Ogstons Dani, a heifer she purchased in the 1975 National Pot O'Gold Sale. Dani is now the highest ranking Jersey on the Historical Cow Performance Index List which ranks over 97,000 cows.

Dani has won several other national production awards including the 1977 Pot O'Gold Production Contest.

The AJCC awards eight $500 scholarships annually to outstanding Jersey youth to help further their college education.

Boyd challenges 4-H leaders

BY SALLY BAIR

LANCASTER — Lancaster County's 4-H leaders were honored; challenged and rewarded for the important role they play in the total 4-H picture at the annual leaders' banquet held Thursday night at the Farm and Home Center.

Two hundred of the county's nearly 500 4-H adult leaders and 43 teen leaders were recognized for the contributions they make, and special awards were given to supporters of the 4-H program.

Darvin Boyd, recently announced winner of the state 4-H Alumni Award challenged his audience to continue to be models in serving 4-H "with moral leadership and a sense of worthiness of the individual."

Acknowledging the importance of 4-H in his life, Boyd said, "What I represent - what I am - what I have become is due in no small part to 4-H."

Now a vice-president with Hamilton Bank, Boyd was a state 4-H Achievement winner, represented the County as an International 4-H Farm Youth Exchange Delegate to Korea and returned there to work for six years to expand, plan, and conduct the 4-H program in that country.

County 4-H Agent Nancy Meyers made several awards to supporters of 4-H.

Bob Bucher, Commonwealth National Bank, was given a certificate in appreciation of the bank's support of youth work. For several years the bank has supplied calendars to 4-H leaders, and Bucher, as a representative of the Lancaster County Bankers Association, is instrumental in awarding six college scholarships worth $200 each to 4-H'ers. Support is also given to the IFYE program.

Another special award was presented to Bob Garland, manager of Hubbard Farms, Neffsville, for his cooperation and support of the 4-H embryology project which reaches several thousand new 4-H'ers each year through schools. Hubbard Farms has donated over 100 dozen fertilized eggs for this project.

Darvin Boyd was selected as the Pennsylvania 4-H Alumni Award winner and challenged the adult leaders and teen leaders to continue their work in developing themselves and the young 4-H members they serve.

In a third presentation, certificates were presented to the Elvin Brenneman family, Mount Joy, and the Curtis Akers family, Quarryville, for their part in hosting Peter Lee, an International 4-H Youth Exchangeee from the United Kingdom.

County Agent Jay Irwin recognized 45 adult leaders for their years of service and Jan Escott, extension agent with the Expanded Foods and Nutrition Program, gave certificates of recognition to teen leaders. She also announced a second annual nutrition awards recipient, Shawn Bloyer, who has been a leader for three years with the 4-H project at the Boy's club.

As the main speaker, Boyd, an 11-year 4-H member, urged that there be a greater emphasis on the teen leader, having them take a larger role in 4-H. "To help teens grow, you must challenge them with more than a project," he said.

Boyd suggested that their role be tied more with the adult leader to make them feel like equal partners. "The world goes forward on the feet of youth," he stated. "We must work with them, and encourage them to get the full benefits."

He added, "Accentuate the positive; don't criticize, but encourage. There are greater talents which exist in young people. Give them the challenge."

According to Boyd, in developing youth leaders must help them build respect, have pride and recognize the worthiness of the individual.

He called competition an important part of 4-H, adding, "Competition is very important to learn, but also to gain the proper perspective."

Recalling his days as a 4-H'er when he lost money on his project and placed low in a class, Boyd said, "You have to be a good loser. Losing was a greater thing to me then winning because I grew."

He reminded leaders that some children respond to competition but others do not. He added, "It is easy to be a winner. The real challenge is to be a loser, and to lose without losing confidence in themselves."

Boyd told the leaders that they are making an investment of nearly one half million dollars in the 4-H program in the county. He got his dollar value by charging them $4.76 an hour for the hours they put in and and $.17 a mile for the miles they drive.

He said a 1974 survey showed that adult leaders average over 200 hours per person and teen leaders over 40 hours. Furthermore leaders drive over 400 miles and most leaders contribute about $50 out of their own pockets to help with materials.

"You folks are giving from your heart," He noted. "We salute you for your role and your investment. It makes 4-H a real bargain for those participating."

Challenging the adult leaders as well as encouraging the teen leaders, Boyd told them three qualities they should have to be successful in life. Integrity, he said, is the foundation upon which they should build. "You spend a lifetime at it. You know if you have it or not. Integrity is the most important quality a person can have. One thing you can give and still keep is your word."

He urged the leaders to believe in themselves. "Be positive, not negative; build not destroy. Life in America, under God, is a great opportunity and a positive experience," he stated.

He added, "Tell me what you believe and I'll tell you what you'll achieve. It's your attitude, not your aptitude which will determine your altitude."

Persistence is the third quality he urged on his audience. "Don't let the valleys and low points get you down. Don't quit."

He urged agri-business and ag-industries to continue to support the 4-H program, pointing out that it is the largest youth organization in the nation with 5 million young people as members. He added that voluntary organizations are the strength and backbone of America. "You are all unsung heroes," he said.

John Charles, Penn Manor Community Club and Kathy Shenk, Mastersonville County Club, presented musical entertainment. Both

Secretary 'disappointed' with mushroom import decision

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell Wednesday expressed "disappointment" with President Carter's recent decision on mushroom imports.

He said the decision would give little help to the industry in areas where help is needed most. Pennsylvania leads the nation in mushroom production and processing of mushroom products.

The U.S. International Trade Commission recommended in August that a three-year program of quantitative restrictions on mushroom imports be put in effect, to allow the national mushroom industry time to recover from the damage inflicted by imported processed mushrooms.

A minority report, endorsed by Hallowell, called for a five-year program of import quotas.

On Friday, the President announced his decision, which includes increases in tariff duties on imported processed mushrooms, and the creation of an interagency task force to work with the American Mushroom Institute, but no import quotas.

Hallowell said, "I am very disappointed with the scope and nature of the President's actions. After a very lengthy process of investigation and public hearings, the International Trade Commission recommended two possible alternatives to provide assistance to this industry, which has been hurt by imports in the past ten years.

"The President, unfortunately for the Pennsylvania mushroom industry, has ignored the carefully considered recommendations of his own commission, and has gone against the purpose of the hearing process," he said.

Hallowell said an increase in tariff levels will do little to solve the problems faced by Pennsylvania growers and processors.

"Imported processed mushrooms have been arriving in the United States, and severely undercutting prices in the open marketplace," he said.

"This increase in tariff levels will not provide any assistance to the growers of mushrooms, who still must sell their products to processors at prices set by their buyers. And the net effect to processors will be a decline in their profit margin with similar impact on the retailers of processed mushroom products."

Hallowell said the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture would continue to work with the Pennsylvania mushroom growers and processors to seek "effective, efficient long range solutions to the problems which have disrupted the industry."

Food processors react to mushroom tariff

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Food Processors Association, a trade association, representing the mushroom, fruit and vegetable processors in Pennsylvania is reacting rather cautiously to the President's action on mushrooms.

Rocco Pugliese, executive director of the Pennsylvania Food Processors Association, said he feels that the three-year tariff increase, as determined by President Carter, will not effectively correct the import problem as would a tariff quota, which was recommended by the International Trade Commission.

The ITC majority and minority report recommended a three and five year import quota respectively.

Pugliese did say, "Even though Carter's action was not consistent with the ITC recommendation, we will take a wait-and-see approach to determine whether the tariff can successfully stem the flow of foreign mushroom imports into this country and in turn restory the mushroom industry as a viable component of the State's economic community.

"We just hope the President is correct in his assertion that the tariff will deal with the problem," he said.

Mushrooms

more and unload them over here?" asked a spokesman for PFA.

Concluded PFA: It's still unfair competition.

The Grange, on the other hand, maintains the decision for a tariff "is not half bad."

The Grange said the tariffs pretty much equalize the gap between the costs of production of foreign and domestic mushrooms.

The problem the Grangers see is the tariff, lasting only three years, is a temporary solution. They said they will continue to work for a permanent solution.

For mushroom growers there is consolation that a President finally took action, any action, to provide some form of relief. Three times in the past decade a president has declined to take any action at all on mushroom imports.

In all three cases the International Trade Commission had recommended presidential action.

Was the move by Carter politically motivated?

"I don't think so," said one observer adding, "there just aren't that many American mushroom growers around any more."

But then, that was exactly the problem a quota or tariff on mushrooms was meant to handle.

Worms Are Stealing Your Milk

Break the worm cycle with BAYMIX FROM AGWAY

More than ninety percent of all dairy cows are worm-infested. It's true Researchers have found worms in nine out of ten dairy cows inspected. With these odds, chances are your herd has worms (internal parasites).

Worms can cost you money by reducing...
- milk production potential
- feed efficiency
- growth of replacement animals

BAYMIX is the "Dollars and Sense" wormer. Here's why:
- no milk withdrawal with Baymix so you can worm the whole herd at one time
- Only by worming the whole herd at one time can you effectively break the worm cycle and reduce internal parasitisms on the whole farm
- Easy and convenient to feed
- No handling or restraints to stress animals
- Just topdress on feed for six days

Start using Baymix and stop worms from stealing your milk

Dairylea elects five directors

PEARL RIVER, N.Y. — Clyde E. Rutherford of Otego, NY, has been re-elected president of Dairylea Cooperative. He is the Dairylea District 9 director and an active dairy farmer.

Elected first vice president of the cooperative was John H. Widger of Ellicottsville, NY. He is director of Dairylea district 2.

Silas Eakins was re-elected secretary of the cooperative. He is director of district 11. His farm is near Potsdam, NY.

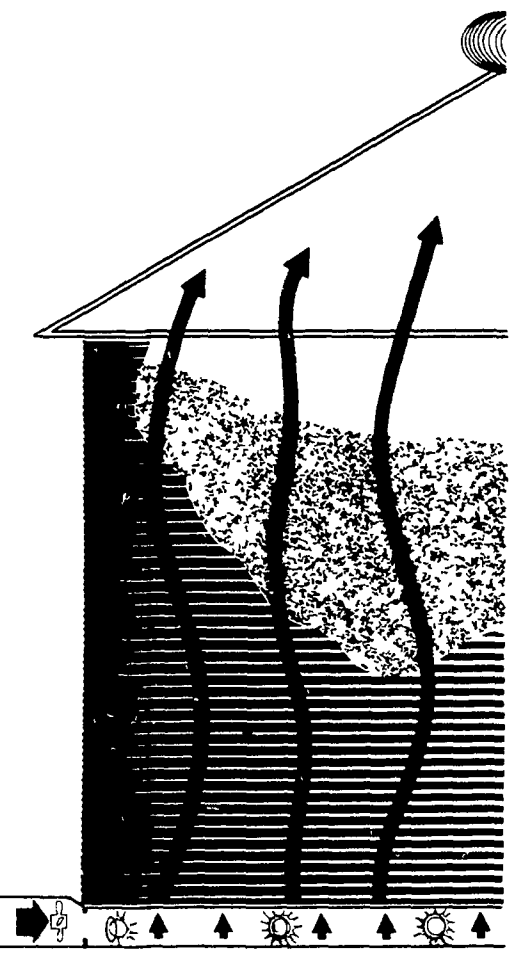
Re-elected second vice president was Ainsworth W. Sondericker of Attica, NY. He is district 3 director.

Robert W. Whipple was re-elected treasurer. The Towanda, PA dairyman is director of Dairylea district 5.

Dairylea is the northeast's largest farm-to-consumer marketer of milk and milk products.

In its fiscal year ending March 31, 1980 Dairylea handled more than 2.1 billion pounds of farm milk for its members, with net sales of $408,000,000.

"Harvestall Chillcuring works great. I get top quality corn for less than I used to pay for shelling alone."



ANDY GLICK, Oley, Pa.

"I used to get my crib corn shelled for feeding my hogs. But since that cost around 8¢ a bushel even before hauling costs, I decided I'd be better off with storage. I went with the Harvestall and have never regretted it.

"I've put as high as 32% moisture corn in my Harvestall and you know, I've never had a mold problem."

"So I'm impressed with the Harvestall system and the quality corn I get with it. And I get it cured down for less than it used to cost just for shelling.

"I've recommended the Harvestall to my friends. I'm really happy with it."

HARVESTALL

The Harvestall Chillcuring System

It's simple When grain comes out of the field it's a living seed So instead of destroying the seed with high heat, moisture is removed with natural air ventilation The grain keeps all its feed value, there is less shrinkage than with heat drying because only moisture is removed, not dry matter You'll never see white dust in Chillcured corn You actually save half of what you're used to losing in heat shrink

There's no gas or oil to buy Natural air carries away heat and moisture as the corn releases it

Harvestall Chillcuring is a back-to-basics system that just simply makes good sense Find out more about it

Wins Progressive Breeders Award

The last dairy farmer in Chateau County

CENTERVILLE, Del. — Here in the rolling hills of "Chateau Country," is a lovely place to live, but a hard place to be a dairy farmer. But that's where Levis Phipps, Jr. is raising an award-winning herd—on 160 hilly acres, totally surrounded by million—dollar estates, chic boutiques, and an exclusive country club.

Only the best beer and liquor bottles come sailing over the fence to booby trap the cows' pasture.

Phipps' herd is just the third in Delaware history to win the Progressive Breeders Award of the National Holstein-Friesian Association. The old Winterthur herd of the late Colonel Henry B. duPont—one of the top breeding herds in the United States during the 1920's and '30's—won the prestigious award eight times. The University of Delaware herd was honored twice, in 1964 and 1965.

How does a hard-working family farmer join this elite company?

Why is he doing his dairy farming in Chateau Country?

Let's start with the second question first: he was there before his neighbors were. Phipps' Quaker ancestors settled that land and put up the house and barn before the Civil War. (Actually, the barn went up first, in acordance with Quaker custom.) The last three generations of Phipps men died in that very barn.

Levis' father and grandfather went peacefully, working with the cows they loved. But uncle Horace Dillworth (a kinsman of former Philadelphia mayor Richardson Dillworth) wasn't so lucky. He met his end there in an encounter with an enraged bull.

There's only one young bull at Centerdel Farm today, along with 67 milking cows, assorted young stock, a gaggle of geese and a pair of donkeys.

Phyllis Phipps, Levis' wife, wants to get rid of the bull before he gets old enough to be really dangerous. Her own uncle, a herdsman from whom she learned her love of farm animals, spent two years in the hospital after a run-in with a bull.

But these days a dairy farmer doesn't really need bulls on the premises to rate the Progressive Breeders Award. By working closely with Delaware extension dairy specialist George Haenlein, the veterinary researchers at the University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center, the Dairy Herd Improvement Association supervisors and their personal veterinarian, the Phipps are able to make use of the most sophisticated record keeping and breeding techniques.

The Phipps keep type records on their animals in addition to the more commonly used milk production records. Not coincidentally, their cows are often blue ribbon winners and top sellers at the Delaware State Fair and Annual Holstein Sale at Harrington.

But it's a cow named Heli that really demonstrates the reason the Phipps won the Progressive Breeders Award. Because they thought the animal was too good to turn over to the impersonal care of a hired hand, they took her into their own basement when she was born and raised her with tender loving care.

Now Heli is something of a family pet, but she's also much more. She has been classified 86 (out of a perfect 100, which is very good). She has about a 4.3 percent test, and for the third year in a row, she has averaged more than 1000 pounds of milk fat per year. In the past year, she produced 28,565 pounds of milk—more than any other cow they've ever had.

Right now Heli is pregnant, artificially inseminated by the top bull in the country by way of the U.S. Mail. And she's not only carrying a calf herself; another one of her embryos has been transplanted into the uterus of another less valuable cow.

Phyllis and Levis Phipps pose with Heli, the Holstein who played a major role in their receiving the Progressive Breeder Award.

Artificial insemination makes it possible for a proven bull to sire many more than his normally expected 150 or so calves, anywhere in the world. Likewise, hormone injections, ova collection and embryo transplants make it possible for a good cow like Heli to have more than her normally expected number of calves.

With the use of these breeding techniques in combination, a good dairy herd can soon become an excellent one. The Phipps' herd is a prime example.

Despite such success, the outside world is closing in on Centerdel Farm. It's starting to seem too hard to continue as the only dairy farmers in Chateau Country.

While the Phipps children are spending afternoons and weekends feeding cows and grooming calves for their 4-H projects, their schoolmates are taking extended vacations in Hawaii and the South of France. These other children can't understand why the Phipps kids have to work so hard without even getting paid for it.

So Levis, Phyllis and the children are planning a move. They're looking for a more congenial place to farm with room for expansion and neighbors who share their lifestyle-neighbors whose children understand the need for all members of a family to pull together for a common goal. They'll have to sell part of the ancestral land to do it, but they'll keep some of it in the family.

Grandmother Phipps plans to stay on at the old place. It's hard to turn one's back on such a long-standing family tradition.

Levis and Phyllis will take the herd with them, though, and they'll bring along their love of animals; the acceptance of hard work; their good business sense; and their willingness to take calculated risks with the latest scientific techniques that earned them the Progressive Breeders Award.

Md. Milk Producers plan district meetings

BALTIMORE, MD. — Annual membership meetings, including the nomination of directors, will be held during the coming week in four districts of Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers.

The meetings include:

District 13 - Wednesday, St. John's Church of Christ, New Oxford, Pa.; District 12 - Thursday, Boonsboro Fire Hall, Boonsboro, Md.; District 11 - Friday, Grantsville Fire Hall, Grantsville, Md.; District 3 - Monday, Nov. 3, Carroll County Agriculture Center, Westminster, Md.

Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers will hold its District 8 Annual Membership 8 Annual Membership Meeting, Monday, October 27 at the Kauffman Community Center in Kauffman Station, Pa.

The program, to follow a dinner served at 7 p.m., will consist of reports on national and local milk production and the current status of Holly Milk Plant in Carlisle.

Reports will be given by MCMP President, Herbert W. Wessel of Hampstead, Business Manager Ralph L. Strock of Towson, and District Director Carl B. Allison of Chambersburg, Pa. Field representatives for the area are Pete DeBaugh of Boonsboro and Jay Waybright of Littlestown, Pa.

District 8 includes 57 member-producers located in Franklin and Fulton Counties of Pennsylvania who have produced more than 39 million pounds of milk in 1980 through the month of September.

The 47 member-producers of District 13 will nominate a director to be ratified by the total membership at the cooperative's annual meeting in March, for a 3-year term from March 1981 through February 1984. Paul R. Waybright of Gettysburg, is the incumbent director whose term expires in February, 1981.

District 13 is made up of producers in Adams, Cumberland and Juniata who have produced more than 15 million pounds of milk in 1980 through the month of September.

The 50 member-producers of District 12 will nominate a director to be ratified by the total membership at the cooperative's annual meeting in March. Charles H. Stiles of Boonsboro, Md. is the incumbent director whose term expires in February, 1981.

District 12 is made up solely of Washington County producers who have produced almost 27 million pounds of milk in 1980 through the month of September.

The 104 member-producers of District 11 will nominate a director to be ratified by the total membership, too. Bailey Herring of Farmington, Pa. is the incumbent director.

District 11 includes Fayette and Somerset Counties in Pennsylvania, Garrett County, Md. and Preston County, W.Va. Members in the area have produced more than 31 million pounds of milk in 1980 through the month of September.

Current directors for District 3 are Melvin E. Leppo of Sykesville and Herbert W. Wessel, Jr. of Hampstead. District 3 includes 140 member-producers located in Carroll County which has more MCMP producers than any other county. In 1980 through September, these producers have produced more than 91 million pounds of milk.

The meeting programs, to follow a dinner served at 7 p.m., will consist of reports on national and local milk production and the current status of Holly Milk Plant in Carlisle. In addition, members will be given an update of MCMP's financial condition, including its operating division, as well as the current status of the long-range planning commissioned at their 1979 Annual Meeting.

McMahon is Pa. Granger of Year

HARRISBURG — Mary McMahon, Ridgway, Elk County, has been named Pennsylvania's "Granger of the Year" for 1980, announced Charles E. Wismer, Jr., Master of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

McMahon has been a Grange member for thirty years, and has served as the chaplain of Montmorenci Grange, No. 1704, for the last two years. She also served as a Subordinate Lecturer for twelve years.

Active in numerous community organizations, McMahon is on the Elk County Fair Board, she has served as a delegate for Elk County at the Penn State Trustee elections for the past three years, and sings in numerous community choirs.

McMahon chaired the Montmorenci County Community Service Committee last year when it won third place honors in the State Grange Community Service Contest.

The Granger of the Year Award she received is not the only honor she has won for active service. McMahon recently was named to "Who's Who Among Women Civic Leaders in America" by the Dupont National Civic Endowment.

As a respected member of her community, she is an Associate Director of the Elk County Conservation District, Secretary of the Ridgway Retail Association, and a member of the Elk County Recreation and Tourist Council Board of Directors, to name a few.

McMahon will receive her award at the Annual Grange Sessions, to be held in Lewistown on Tuesday, October 28, at 10 a.m.

Honorable mentions in the contest were awarded to Albert Lahew, of Waynesburg, Green County, and Mary Buffington, of Chadds Ford, in Chester County.

American Egg Board meets in Harrisburg

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania was host to the American Egg Board meeting Wednesday and Thursday at the Host Inn, Harrisburg.

The full board of 36, including 18 members and 18 alternates, met to discuss such areas as export development, product and market development, nutrition research, and promotion and advertising.

Only delegates may vote on issues, but alternates can serve on the various committees.

Pennsylvania representatives at the meeting included W. Robert Park, R4 Valencia, who serves as the chairman of the promotion and advertising committee; and Don Horn of Pennfield in Lancaster.

Best news for Pennsylvania egg producers was the Board's approval of $20,000 for promotion activities in the state.

The funds will allow Vicki Wass to work with agencies which provide food service for institutions.

Many colleges and hospitals, rather than take the burden of menu planning upon themselves, now purchase food services from experts in the field.

Pennsylvania has about a half dozen such firms working in the state.

The Keystone staters said they will use their grant money to show these menu planners a handful of egg recipes and point out how cost efficient and easy to prepare those dishes are.

Quiches and scrambled eggs will be among the items promoted to help boost egg consumption.

Egg producers also were informed that the American Egg Board has purchased time on ABC and NBC television networks during the daytime hours for egg promotion spots.

The television spots, aimed at the times homemakers will most likely be watching TV, are scheduled to continue through the first three quarters of 1981.

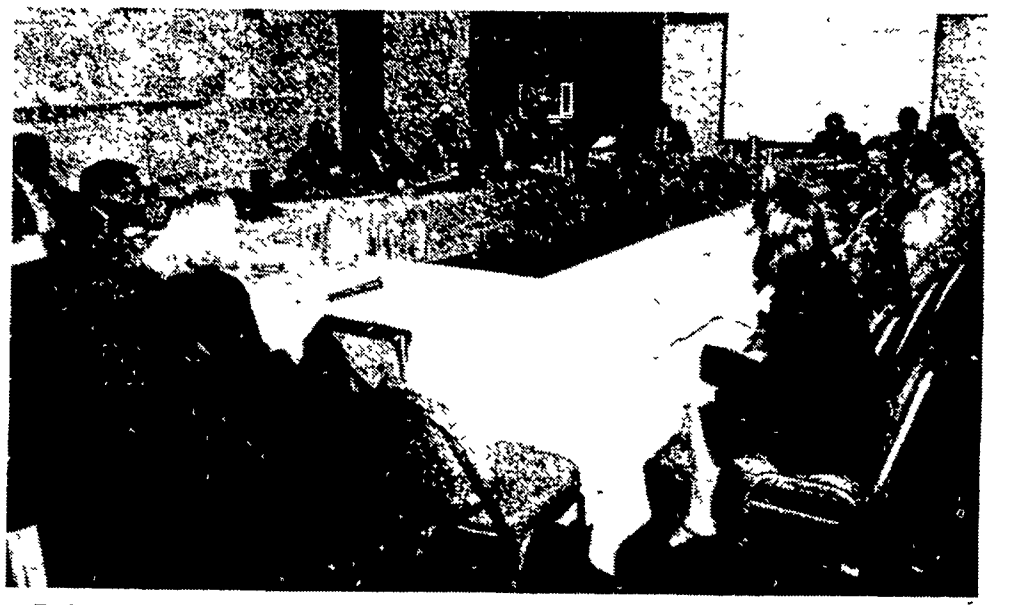
The State and Regional Support Committee agreed to a brown egg promotion campaign in the New England states, especially in the Boston market area and Maine.

The slogan to be used, "Fresh New England Brown Eggs—Incredible," ties in with the Incredible Edible Egg campaign used nationally.

American Egg Board will be providing partial funding for the estimated $69,200 program.

New England egg men hope to show an egg promotion campaign can pay off, not just for brown eggs, but for any eggs if the promotion budget is provided.

If the current marketing research program, which will continue through 1981, is successful, the New England group said it hopes to expand its advertising into a full-fledged program in coming years.—CH



Delegates to the American Egg Board spent their time in the afternoon attending one of three sessions, all of which ran at the same time. Here, members discuss cost-effective advertising in the consumer education session. Several Pennsylvania members are seated at the head of the table.

Pennsylvania representatives to the American Egg Board include from left, W. Robert Park, Valencia and Don Horn, Pennfield, Lancaster. With them at the meeting held Wednesday and Thursday is John Hoffman, Pennsylvania Poultry Association, who sported a new beard for the occasion.

Fire ban imposed in state forests

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources today imposed a ban on all open fires and smoking in the state forest and state park lands of five forest districts, effective at noon Wednesday, Oct. 22.

The ban also involves state game lands within the five forest districts, according to a spokesman for the Pennsylvania Game Commission. It will have no effect on hunting or other recreational activities on game lands, the state forests or state parks.

An open fire includes smoking materials, gas-operated stoves and lights, charcoal fires and fires in outside fireplaces. Also banned is the use of gas-operated stoves or lantern inside a tent.

It is permissible to use the above inside a permanent structure, a camp cabin or trailer constructed of wood, metal, brick or stone.

Announcement of the ban was made by State Forester Richard R. Thorpe and William C. Forrey, directors of DER's bureaus of Forestry and State Parks respectively.

The forest districts, and the counties they comprise are:

Michaux Forest District 1: York, Adams and portions of Cumberland and Franklin.

Tuscarora Forest District 3: Perry, Juniata, Huntingdon, Mifflin and parts of Cumberland and Franklin.

Weiser Forest District 18: Lehigh, Berks, Lebanon, Dauphin, Schuylkill, and Carbon.

Delaware Forest District 19: Northampton, Monroe and Pike.

Wyoming Forest District 20: Northumberland, Montour, Luzerne, Sullivan and Columbia.

The decision to impose the ban on state lands followed discussions with DER Secretary Clifford L. Jones, who concurred on the need for such action to curb the possibility of fire because of the critical drought situation in the state.

Jones said, that while the current ban affects only five of the state's 20 forest districts, there is a definite need for all persons, regardless of where they reside, to be extremely careful with fire.

"Our Division of Forest Fire Protection," said Jones, has been urging the public to be careful with open fires and smoking for the last several weeks, even before the drought situation reached the critical stage.

"We all are aware of the scarcity of water. Wells and streams are drying up, reservoirs are low and many communities have imposed restrictions on water usage. This leaves little, if any, water available for combatting fires.

"To compound the problem, we are in the midst of the fall fire season. Ground cover is dry and, combined with a blanket of fallen leaves, provides the right amount of fuel for a wildfire.

"Until a few weeks ago the problem of wildfires appeared concentrated in the eastern half of the Commonwealth. While these areas remain critical, now there is a deficient amount of rainfall throughout the State and the fire danger is higher than normal," he concluded.

Wingert captures grand champion award

BY RUTH ANN BENEDICT
Staff Correspondent

GREENCASTLE — A Limosine Hereford crossbred owned by 17 year old Jere Wingert, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Eugene Wingert, St. Thomas, captured grand champion of the Franklin County 4-H Baby Beef Show held last Monday at the Greencastle Livestock Barn.

The 1170 pound steer was later sold at an evening sale to Smith's Implements, Inc., Mercersburg, at $2.05 per pound.

Eric Sheiss, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Daryle Sheiss of Chambersburg, won reserve champion honors with his Limosine Hereford Charolais Crossbred.

The 1160 pound steer, which was second place to Wingert's steer in the medium heavy weight class, was also purchased by Smith's Implements, Inc., Mercersburg, at $1.45 per pound.

The 49 club steers and 10 champion steers sold for an average price of 82 cents per pound and averaged a weight of 1060 pounds. The total value of the sale was $53,880.

According to County Agent William Reagan this years sale was the largest baby beef sale in Franklin County since about 1955 or 1956. Judge for the show was Ronald Bolze who operates a livestock business in Loysville.

Paul Stratton, Chambersburg, won the champion fitter honors while Cindy Donough, also of Chambersburg, captured the champion showman honors.

New conservation program to open

LANCASTER — The Lancaster County ASC Committee has recently announced the opening of the Agricultural Conservation Program which begins November 3 and runs through to November 28.

Applications for cost-sharing on all practices will be accepted, however, approvals will be made first on practices intended to be installed late this fall.

All farmers are eligible who own or operate agricultural land in Lancaster County. It is important for farmers to remember though that applications must be filed and approved by the committee before the actual work is begun.

High priority practices will be cost-shared at a 75 percent rate and second priority practices will be cost-shared at 50 percent. No one farmer can receive more than $3500 in one fiscal year.

Approvals by the committee are not on a first-come first-serve basis but are determined according to the severity of the conservation problem and according to the priority of the practice.

An additional sign-up period will be held in the early spring of 1981 for those farmers who plan to do conservation work next summer and fall. However if farmers plan to do work yet this year should visit the ASCS office during the month of November.

Small game season to open November 1

LANCASTER — Pennsylvania's regular small game hunting season will open on Saturday, November 1, at 9 a.m.

Since the entire state will be operating on Eastern Standard Time on November 1, there should be no confusion on the starting time for all hunters everywhere in the state.

Species on which the season opens November 1 include cottontail rabbits, ringneck pheasants, wild turkeys and bobwhite quail. The raccoon hunting season this year opens five days later on Wednesday, November 5.

Grouse and squirrel hunting starts two weeks prior to the regular small game season, having begun on October 18 this year.

The regular small game season for cottontails and pheasants, as well as the squirrel and grouse season, will close on Saturday, November 29.

This year, there will be only a one-week quail season, ending on Saturday, November 8. The raccoon hunting season which opens on November 5 will continue through January 31.

Pre-season reports by district game protectors indicate that supplies of most small game species this year are in the fair-to-good range, following generally successful reproductive seasons with good food supplies and cover conditions.

Two years ago hunters complained about a shortage of rabbits, and a Game Commission survey showed that the cottontail harvest was indeed below the norm for recent years. The pheasant harvest was also off in 1978.

However, the harvest of both pheasants and rabbits rebounded last year, and the outlook for bunnies this year is even better than in 1979.

This fall, district game protectors reported that their supply of cottontails, at least in September, was at an excellent level in two counties, good in 47 counties, fair in 16 counties, and poor in only one county. The best rabbit populations seem to be in eastern counties.

Ringneck pheasant supplies are not at the all-time record level of a few years ago, and with changing land use patterns, probably will never again be that high. When any game species population reaches a peak, there is only one direction the supply can go, and that is down. But the pheasant supply is at a fair level.

In September, district game protectors rated their pheasant populations as good in 10 counties, fair in 52 counties, and poor in 4 counties. The best pheasant hunting will be found in counties in the southern part of the state.

The outlook for turkeys is probably the most exciting part of this year's pre-season hunting picture. Pennsylvania probably has more wild turkeys now than ever before, largely due to an expanding range. Game officials believe that the total turkey population in the state now exceeds 100,000 birds.

In September, district game protectors in 11 counties rated their turkey supplies as excellent, 30 counties reported good populations of the big birds, 14 counties had fair levels of turkeys, and the birds were in poor supply or nonexistent in 12 counties.

Game protectors report that the best turkey hunting this year should be in southcentral counties, followed closely by northeastern and northcentral counties.

In an "average" season, Pennsylvania hunters generally harvest about 2 million cottontail rabbits, close to a million pheasants, nearly 30,000 turkeys and slightly more than 25,000 quail.

These are the daily and possession limits for small game species during the regular season:

Cottontail rabbits - A limit of four per hunter per day and eight in possession.

Ringneck pheasants - The daily limit is two, with a possession limit of four.

Wild turkey - A limit of one per hunter for the fall hunting season.

Bobwhite quail - A daily limit of four, with eight in the possession of a hunter.

Rohrer wins two trophies

UNIONVILLE - Tiffany Rohrer, Nottingham, PA, walked away with a number of trophies from the Unionville Fair on October 11, 1980. She was the exhibitor of the Grand Champion Steer, a straight bred Angus Steer, purchased from Sam Wylie and was also the Champion Junior Showman.

Ed Wylie exhibited the Reserve Grand Champion Steer, a Simmental-cross. The show was judged by Gary Dean, a commercial swine producer from Lancaster County.

In the Showmanship contest, Bill Wylie walked away with the Senior Championship and Frank Witman with the first year member Championship. Champion Polled Hereford Heifer was exhibited by Patty Maniscalco and Reserve Champion Polled Hereford Heifer was exhibited by Andrew Froy.

Thomasville Auction to re-open Wednesday

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

THOMASVILLE — From a massive pile of twisted, charred metal and black, smoking timbers, a York County agriculture industry landmark has been resurrected.

On January 14, 1980, fire swept through the Thomasville Livestock Market along Route 30 west of York, destroying the familiar sales barn where buyers and sellers had gathered for 33 years for the Wednesday evening livestock auction.

This Wednesday evening, the Thomasville market will again come alive with the chanting sing-song of auctioneers, lowing cattle, squealing hogs and the hum of trucks waiting in line to unload at the back-in chutes.

Resplendent in its shiny new barn-red metal exterior, Thomasville Livestock Market, Inc., is set to pick up right where it left off, with a few new surprises for clients.

Guiding hand of the auction's restoration has been Leroy Williams, president of the farmer-stockholder corporation that five years ago purchased the sales facility to assure continued nearby markets for meat producers.

Even as the bulldozers chugged through the debris, clearing wood ashes and concrete chunks, the stockholders met to plan a new era for the old auction.

There was a little left that was salvageable.

Smoked foundations traced the old outlines of the sprawling building and the slanted floor of the unloading area remained. Part of the massive old weigh scales could be used.

As farmers are wont to do in times of disaster, volunteers began arriving from all directions, offering donations of time, materials, machinery and, most importantly, moral support.

Leroy Williams smiles as he pays tribute to the over 400 hours of volunteer time given to help rebuild the maze of pens and gates that fill the 152-foot long by 145-foot wide pole building.

Mostly, the volunteers hammered. And then hammered more. Some 2500 pounds of nails hold together the estimated nearly ten miles of board feet of oak, pine and treated fir lumber and posts.

More intricate contracting work went to the firm of J. Paul Mellinger, a builder from nearby Abbottstown. Rebuilding began in earnest in April, when the first posts were set in the ground.

A new corrugated metal roof with skylights has replaced the old roofing-paper style, and peaks over 30-foot center posts, giving the holding pen complex a lighter, cooler and much more airy interior. One new addition is a broad, fenced catwalk that stretches from the second floor arena seating out over the pens, where buyers can assess groups of livestock in all corners of the holding area.

"We can handle 800 head of hogs and cattle," Williams assures customers waiting for the Wednesday evening opening. "We plan to sell the consignments in order just as they come, to be fair to every seller."

"A building within a building," is what Williams labels the new sales arena itself, with semi-circular seating rising above the ground floor auction ring. Built of over 9000 12-inch cement blocks, the new sales area construction adhers to strict Labor and Industry building codes for fire safety. Updated amenities to the many families that frequent the auction include a spacious ladies lounge on the second floor, plus a snack bar and comfort facilities just inside the ground floor entrance.

New offices, including a public phone, are also just inside the entrance for customer convenience.

While the surroundings will be new and modernized, most of the staff of 18 are experienced ringmen, auctioneers, livestock herders and office employees, many of whom have been with the Thomasville market for several years.

As in the past, auction activities will begin at 6:30 p.m., with small items like poultry, eggs, fruits and vegetables first on the sales block. Livestock follows immediately.

On November 5, Thomasville will host the annual York-Adams beef show and sale, a 4-H event the facility has supported for the past 22 years. On the following Friday evening, November 7, a special feeder sale is planned, the first of what Williams said he hopes will become a regular event.

York County presently has no hay and straw auction. Williams would like to see one offered to area farmers and hopes to add it to the regular Wednesday afternoon schedule.

Thomasville has always handled hogs on private treaty basis on auction day, and that part of the business will continue as before.

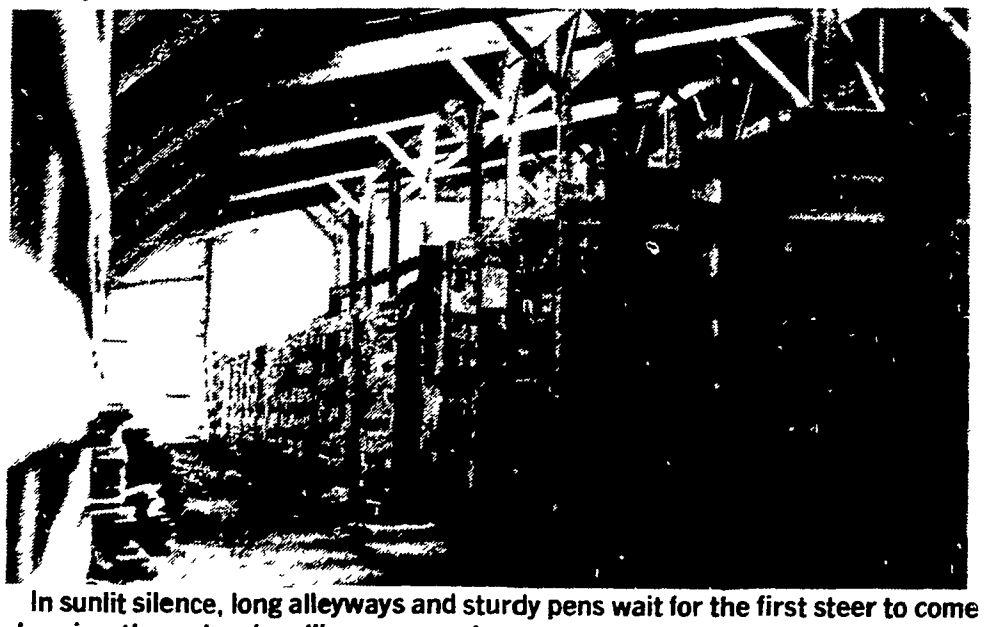
Small tool, appliance and household article auctions have been held periodically in the past and Williams foresees - including such sales - on a once or twice monthly schedule. Private sales also can be scheduled.

Thomasville Livestock Market primarily serves producers and buyers in the York, Adams, and Cumberland county area, and northern Maryland.

Thomasville Livestock Market president Leroy Williams studies the rebuilt facilities from the new catwalk addition.

Workmen hang one of the last of a hundred gates designed to facilitate the movement of cattle through the sales process.

Following a January fire that leveled the original structure, Thomasville Livestock Market is ready to go back into service with a brand new modern look and expanded services.



In sunlit silence, long alleyways and sturdy pens wait for the first steer to come charging through, signalling a new chapter in the history of the 33-year-old Thomasville Livestock Market.

FFA completes corn test plot project

ELVERSON — Members of the Twin Valley FFA chapter, Morgantown, have recently completed a most important chapter project.

In cooperation with several local seed corn dealers and farmers they have put into operation part of the FFA motto-"Learning To Do - Doing To Learn." Members have completed yield checks on the thirty varieties of corn in the chapter test plot, located on the Calvin Kurtz farm, RD2 Elverson.

The test plot enables local seed corn dealers and farmers to compare many popular varieties throughout the growing season. Yield checks performed by chapter members provide another means of comparison among varieties.

According to Ronald Frederick, vocational agriculture teacher and FFA advisor at Twin Valley, students also learn to identify corn insects and disease problems while doing yield checks, and identify any weeds found in the field.

The test plot was planted on May 20, 1980 by Gary and Marvin Stoltzfus, local farmers. It includes varieties provided by the following dealers - Mr. Christ Esh, Eastland; Mr. Ben O. Stoltzfus, Doeblers; Mr. Titus Beam, Northrup King; New Holland Agway, Agway; Mr. Elmer Hertzler, Trojan; Smith Brothers, Cargill; Mr. Joseph Kennel, Funks; Mr. Vernon Orr and Mr. Milton Howe, Pioneer; and Mr. Ira Nissley, DeKalb. Varieties planted are selected by requests from farmers as well as by the contributing companies and salesmen.

Each variety is hand yield checked by harvesting one-one hundredths of an acre. Plant populations are calculated, as is the percentage of stalks broken over below the ear. The moisture at harvest is measured to make yield calculations at a standard moisture of 15.5%. Finally the average ear weight is calculated.

Information from this year's test plot is now available from any of the salesmen, the vocational agriculture department at Twin Valley High School, or the co-chairmen of this year's plot - Tim Kurtz, Nelson Beam, or Don Stoltzfus.

Chester leaders hold banquet

CHESTER — The 1980 Chester County Leaders Appreciation Banquet was held on October 14 at the Po-Mar-Lin Firehall.

Sixty-four leaders and guests attended this banquet with certificates being presented to all 5, 10, 15, 20 and 25 year leaders. William Lindley from the State 4-H office spoke on different aspects of being a 4-H leader, and the role that the leader plays in the life of many young people.

No superstition in competition

HARRISBURG — You can't say that Symbol Acre Farm, of Leola, was superstitious in competing in the Penn National Horse Show in the Farm Show Building this week.

Total number of entries owned or stabled at the farm of Mr and Mrs. Robert Wentz, 155 Quarry Rd., was 13

Their first class of competition was the Open Five-Gaited Saddle Horse There were 13 entries in the class

But starting with that class, Symbol Acre started a string of second-place finishes in early competition on Tuesday Red ribbons were won in the Open Five-Gaited, Open Three-Gaited Saddle Horse and Harness Pony - Limit.

Delta Queen, an eight-year-old chestnut mare with Beth Wentz up, finished in the runnerup spot in the field of 13 in the five-gaited competition

Lancaster beef producers tour industry's start to finish

LANCASTER — Over 100 beef producers from Lancaster and surrounding counties hopped on tour buses Tuesday to take a closer look at their industry's end result and two Berks County feedlots.

The first stop of the day was the Moyer Packing Company located in Souderton. The beef producers disembarked to take a first hand look at a modern packing operation, starting with cattle waiting in holding pens to boxes of beef being wheeled into waiting refrigerator trailers.

Robert Summy, R1 Manheim, is the head buyer for MOPAC. He told the group some of the statistics and history of the plant.

The butchering business was a family tradition for the Moyers, starting back in 1885 with Jacob Freed. The daughter of Freed became the wife of Abram F. Moyer and in 1910 the two of them and their four sons, Nelson, Abram, Jacob and Curtis took over Freed's butchering business.

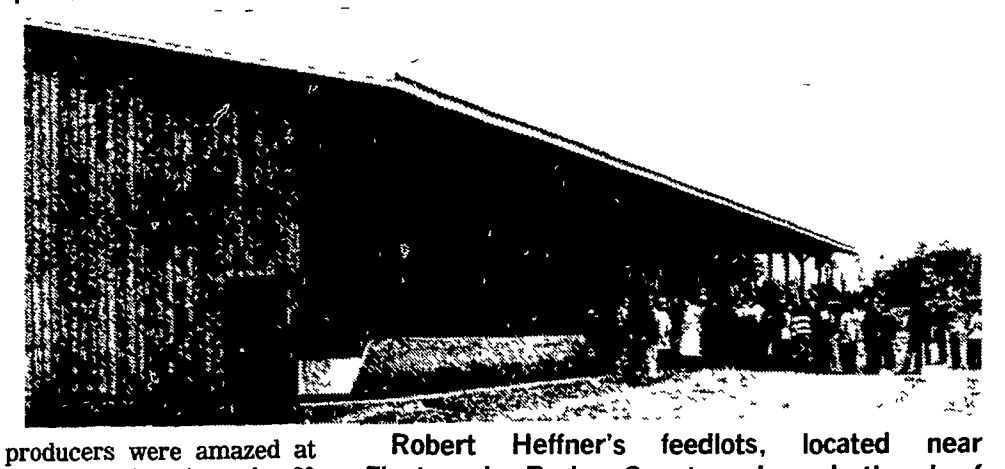
From then on, Moyer's business grew larger and expanded with many changes over the years. The latest change is the expansion of the plant, with the completion of the 4-month-old boning, bagging, boxing, and shipping departments.

The beef producers listened closely to Summy's explanation on the complexities of the plant's operations. They learned that Moyer Packing Co. buys cattle in 11 states.

Summy reported 85-90% of the cattle bought in Lancaster County are purchased during the summer months; other months of the year, the cattle are bought out West and shipped in.

Summy also pointed out the plant slaughters cows, steers, heifers and bulls depending on market conditions. "At times, cows make up three-quarters of the day's kill, but normally we kill about 600 steers and 300 cows in a day."

Glen Moyer, son of one of Moyer Packing Co's four founding fathers, tells a group of Lancaster County beef producers about the company's new boxing plant.



Robert Heffner's feedlots, located near Fleetwood, Berks County, showed the beef producers a new face to a metal pole building. Heffner tacked wooden siding on his barn to keep the cold winter air out like snowfence traps snow.

The touring beef producers were amazed at the fact that in only 20 minutes from the time an animal is stunned, it is hanging in the chill cooler.

Nothing is wasted during the meat processing, explained Summy. Waste products go to North Penn Hide Company, an affiliate of Moyer Packing Co., and are rendered into blood meal, bone meal, protein meal, and tallow. Hides are cured and tanned there and are later sold and used for leather products, such as shoes, belts, handbags, and other items.

Summy raised some eyebrows with the amazing statistic that the plant processes 1½ cattle per minute or 90 cattle per hour on the fabrication floor. On

(Turn to Page A38)

House grader Dale Monnin explains to the group how the meat is graded while the Federal grader passes judgement on the line.

Doris Lorah tells the group of over 100 cattlemen about her father's feedlot. Dorry is the daughter of Henry Eyrich, R1 Oley. Their operation moves about 1600 head through each year. Holding the loudspeaker is Moyer's Bob Summy.

Animal rights

Dr. Fox said he feels it is inhumane to deprive an animal of its natural needs just as it is inhumane to inflict unnecessary pain. Therefore, many accepted drug testing methods also come under question by the group.

Fox said he feels all farm and laboratory animals should be given five basic rights: 1. the freedom to be able to get up easily; 2. to lie down; 3. to turn around; 4. to stretch and 5. to groom.

He has been quoted as saying social animals should have some kind of social interaction.

"What rights does a veal calf have? Veal calves have eyes and legs, therefore they should have light to see by and sufficient freedom to move."

What does all this mean to the producers?

It could mean a drastic change in production practices costing a great deal of time and money. It could also mean more labor.

According to Dr. Robert W. Berg, an animal science professor with the University of Minnesota, "Animal welfare could become a challenging issue in the 1980s. Poultry producers must be aware of active groups which believe producers are ignoring animal welfare.

"Producers should make every effort to improve the living conditions of their flocks, and improvements should be made as much for the well-being of their flocks as for any other reason," he said in the February issue of Gobbles, a magazine for poultrymen.

"Producers should correct unquestionable conditions without outside force. It should not be necessary for an outside group to come in and set standards," he continued.

Schwindaman claims there will be increasing pressure on Congress to recognize animal rights, and said he feels Congress probably will give in to the welfarists.

He added, "All this controversy doesn't mean there will be legislation, but the potential is definitely there."

And the pressure on Congress may have already begun in the form of a 20 minute special on ABC's 20-20 news program, dealing entirely with the humanist's side for animal rights, according to the poultry speaker.

"The behavioral aspect of animal welfare is coming on very strongly. Society is not going to let us think only of biological aspects any more," Schwindaman said.

He points out that what may seem normal to an onlooker may actually be stress for the animal.

While we may perceive a placid animal, the animal could in actuality be putting off hormones indicative of stress in attempt to adapt to its environment.

So, according to animal rights enthusiasts, there is a vast difference between physiology and behavior that must be studied.

Schwindaman said the movement probably will be advertised on the emotional level. "The image being portrayed is that you're (producers) only interested in economics, not welfare."

And if you think, after all this, that the issue is going to involve only farmers and humanists, guess again.

Veterinarians find they also must take stands.

According to Dr. Ray Thompson, executive director of the Pennsylvania Veterinary Medical Association, animal rights is indeed an issue with which they must deal.

In fact, in the August issue of the PVMA's newsletter, a member, Dr. S.W. Ostrich was quoted as saying, "We are about to be faced with what very well may be the greatest upheaval in animal science of this century.

"We as veterinarians - both individually and collectively - may have to stand up to be counted; for I see in the future two great forces 1. American agriculture and medical research which we have been traditionally a part of since founding of American veterinary medicine, coming into political and cultural conflict with, 2. the American humane movement, to which we are morally bound. Therefore, we who have been given the privilege of caring for the medical needs of animals may soon be asked: 'Which side are we on?'

Dr. Schwindaman speaks to poultry servicemen about the growing issue of animal rights and the impact it will have on the poultry industry.

"This is a dilemma to be sure. Certainly no one, especially veterinarians, would wantingly turn their backs on the needless suffering of subjective thinking animals - but on the other hand, are any of us ready to subject American agriculture and American medical research to rules that would cause such a tremendous economic upheaval in those industries as to have irrevocable repercussions, i.e., are any of us ready to become vegetarians?

"I would suggest that a committee be formed and funded to study, contact, and guide both Agriculture and the Humane Movement. Let us, the organized veterinary profession become leaders and initiators and not sit on the sidelines and accept that which may be forced upon us," he wrote.

Dr. Ostrich's recommendation was considered by the Board of Trustees of the PVMA in May and was approved unanimously.

The PVMA requested that the American Veterinary Medical Association establish such a committee. The PVMA reports that it has appointed an ad hoc committee from its Executive Board to study and make recommendations concerning the appointment of a standing committee and the charge to be made to that committee.

The ironic part of all this controversy is that the animal rights movement seems to be coming at a time when our technology has finally allowed a more plentiful, affordable and speedy supply of food in the market. Technology has increased animal productiveness and decreased labor and production costs significantly.

So the argument remains that the supporters of this questionable act could be doing no more than hurting themselves in their attempts to give the animals their own rights.

What's also ironic is that socially it could be very embarrassing for someone who is not a farmer or producer to not support this movement. Thus the program will virtually engulf everyone who is not actually involved in animal agriculture.

One need only look at the history of animal rights to see that considerable legislative concern has been voiced in the past few years.

In 1873 the government passed the first 28 Hour law; in 1891 the Safe Transport and Humane Treatment; and in 1906 the new 28 Hour law, which was USDA enforced on animals moved by water and rail. And then a jump to 1958 with five acts in the past 20 years. 1958 - Humane Slaughter Act; 1966 - Laboratory Animal Welfare Act, includes animals moved by any mode of transport; 1969 - Endangered Species Act; 1970 - Horse Protection Act; Animal Welfare Act of 1970.

Precident has been set in law to recognize that animals have rights. But a producer's argument might be that people give human feelings and freedoms to subhuman animals. After all, how far are we going to extend these rights? And who has the clout to speak for the animals?

Agway Energy King 849X can give you award-winning yields. Just ask Barry and Janet Smith.

BARRY AND JANET SMITH DISPLAY THEIR AWARD-WINNING AGWAY 849X.

Introduced for grower use just over a year ago, long season Agway Energy King 849X is proving to be a real winner. In fact, Barry and Janet Smith took first place with 849X at the Solanco Fair and at the Lampeter Fair.

Even a quick look at those ears will tell you why. 849X gives you a long and thin ear with exceptional tip fill. 849X is right for seasons with 2950-3100 growing degree days. And its standability, with rapid dry-down, is excellent right through that long season.

WHAT? ANOTHER FIRST PLACE, TOO!

Barry and Janet Smith weren't the only winners with Agway 849X. Walter Clair Martin also won top prize with this exceptional new hybrid at the New Holland Fair. No wonder everyone is asking about 849X.

PUT AN AWARD WINNER TO WORK FOR YOU

The Agway Energy King Hybrids are proving to be real winners for corn growers everywhere. And the 849X is just one success story. With a wide range of field-tested Energy Kings to choose from, there's certain to be one that meets your climate and production needs. So see your local Agway for the details about the award-winning 849X, or any of the new Agway Energy King hybrids.

the kill floor, the rate is even better...104 cattle killed per hour.

Ninety percent of the cattle slaughtered at MOPAC are sold as boxed beef, with only about 200 head a day sold as carcasses. The boxed meat is shipped primarily up and down the East Coast in Moyer's own fleet of trucks.

Handling close to 1000 head of cattle each day, five days a week, enlists the help of a lot of employees. MOPAC currently has about 700 full-time employees on the payroll, from buyers, to boners, to truckers.

MOPAC's Vice-President Michael Silverberg reminded the beef producers they "can't feed cattle the way their grandfathers did, just as meat packers can't process meat the same as their ancestors did."

Silverberg stressed the fact that the packer can't use overfat cattle in box meat plants. "The consumer won't use them. And we can't throw $1 a pound fat away."

Another area of concern for packers, said Silverberg, is the increasing problem of going out of state for beef. He told the local beef feeders that Moyer Packing has more capacity than their present run of about 1000 head a day.

He encouraged the beef producers to be careful when they market their cattle - spread the marketing out by feeding different weight cattle.

Concerning the price paid for beef on the hoof by the packer, Silverberg explained the workings of an intricate supply/demand ratio. He noted the price of beef depends on the price of chicken and pork, the amount of money consumers have to spend, and the type of cattle being marketed.

"When cattle are leaner, the prices are higher," he said. He added that Moyer Packing prefers crossbred steers to the old-fashioned boxy English breeds because crossbreds don't get overfat.

"Cross with something," Silverberg advised, "because crossbreds have a better lean to fat ratio and I understand they gain better."

In closing, Silverberg wrapped up the tour of Moyer Packing's Souderton Plant by telling the beef producers that it only takes a minimum of four days for cattle that are bought by Moyer to be on the shelf in numerous chain stores for consumers to buy.

Then it was back on the bus and on to Berks County where the beef producers toured the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eyrich, near Oley, along with the operation of the Robert Heffner family, near Fleetwood.

The Eyrichs feed out around 1600 head of cattle a year, running mostly Angus, Angus Hereford crosses, and Charolais steers.

They raise around 1000 acres of corn, for silage and grain, along with some barley and a little hay. The crops are then fed to the cattle with the addition of urea and limestone to the corn silage, and protein and trace mineralized salt added to the ground corn.

"When the cattle are first brought in," said daughter Doris Lorah, "we feed them haylage for a few days. They're vaccinated and wormed the first day they are here."

She pointed out their feeding program does not include implanting or feeding Rumensin because the cattle are generally heavy when they're brought in.

While the cattlemen strolled around the feedlot, Lorah explained how the cattle are bedded, usually on corn fodder that is made into 3 ton stacks. The manure is allowed to build up and the pack is cleaned out with bulldozers after the cattle are moved out.

The touring beef producers them moved out for the Heffner farms, where feedlot operations were compared (especially the sizes and styles of silos were scrutenized).

Heffner feeds roughly 1000 head of steers each year and farms about 700 Berks County acres.

Said Heffner, "I buy any weight of cattle, any place I can find them." Some of the 750 head presently at the farm were shipped in from Nebraska.

The Heffner setup also featured a metal pole barn, with one personal modification. Heffner added wooden siding to three sides of the building.

"In the winter time, you can walk within three feet of the sides and the wind is stopped like snowfence stops snow," said Heffner. He added that in the summer he had to open the siding to let more air through. For bedding, Heffner uses corn stalks and sawdust - spread with a manure spreader when it goes in and out.

New ideas? Some of the beef producers commented that going on the tour helped them look at their own setup in new ways. All-in-all, it was a day of learning and comradeship, sharing ideas and frustrations as part of the beef industry.-SM

An assembly line of beef keeps meat moving through the plant at the rate of 90 cattle an hour.

Barb Herr shows top lamb

NEW HOLLAND — The grand champion of the Grassland FFA Market Lamb Sale, shown by Barbara Herr, brought $1 a pound at the first such event held at the New Holland Sales Stables on Thursday.

The reserve grand champion, shown by Carolyn Witmer, brought 77 cents. Both animals were purchased by the Sales Stables.

Entries in the show were judged at the school on Wednesday evening. This marked the first time that a special sale was scheduled and plans call for the event to be continued in future years.

Twenty head, just over a ton of lambs, were sold at an average price of 73.75 a hundredweight. The animals averaged 102 lbs.

Other show placings, beginning with third, exhibitors, weight of entries and price include:

Margaret Herr, 105 lbs., 69 cents; Kirsten Horning, 110, 72 cents; Margaret Herr, 85, 73 cents; Wanda Steffy, 120, 67 cents; Darlene Horning, 105, 72 cents; Maria Lorah, 110, 71 cents; Maria Lorah, 100, 73 cents; Margaret Herr, 95, 73 cents; Kirsten Horning, 115, 74 cents.

Also, Carolyn Witmer, 120, 71 cents; Carolyn Witmer, 115, 71 cents; Deb Martin, 95, 75 cents; Barry Martin, 100, 71 cents; Wanda Steffy, 100, 74 cents; Barb Martin, two at 85 lbs., 72 and 73 cents; Loretta Clisham, 85, 74 cents; Carolyn Witmer, 100, 73 cents.

Top two lambs at Grassland FFA sale, both purchased by New Holland Sales Stables, include grand champion, right, shown by Barbara Herr; and reserve grand champion, shown by Carolyn Witmer.

Penn National

No pre-show jitters for Lebanon's Pam Wunderlich.

Saddle at the Sussex County, N.J. show, along with Champion of the ESHBA Breeders Class. At a show in Syracuse, N.Y., the mare beat the world champion in the Ladies Driving Class, but later stood as reserve champion to her.

The numerous shows and multitude of ribbons and trophies won by Melanie Lipensky keep the Senior at Cedar Crest High School busy saddlesoaping and polishing. She said she hopes to be able to continue her work with horses after graduating from high school and attending nursing school.

Two other Lebanon sisters competed and placed during the Penn National's American Saddlebred show. Pam and Jenny Wunderlich both brought home ribbons.

On Wednesday, Jenny Wunderlich, 15, placed fifth in Three-Gaited Three-Year-Old Classic aboard Starheart s Hoosier Spirit. And on Thursday, Pam, 22, also placed fifth in her Ladies Three-Gaited Horse Class on Genius Jane.

In addition to their two winning mounts, the Wunderlichs have two more Saddlebreds. Besides a 2-year-old that's being trained, they also keep a brood mare, Anacacho's Encore, in foal to Lucky's Decision

Pam, who is a part-time student at Millersville State College, rode Genius Jane to a championship in the Branchville, N.J. Open 3-Gaited Show, and to a research championship at the Quentin Fall Show earlier this year.

Pam said she hopes to continue her showing career with horses after she graduates with her degree in Biology. She gets first hand experience in horse health care through her part-time job with Dr. George Heisey, Avon Animal Clinic.

In the pony competition, the Sweigarts of Denver brought numerous ribbons home to their Mt. View Pony Farm.

The Sweigart's first blue ribbon came on Thursday evening with Joy's Yankee Man coming in first in the Hackney Pony Amateur Lady class. Wildfire was once again pinned on Thursday evening, taking a fourth in the Harness Pony Amateur Gentlemen Class with Galen Sweigart driving. A second place ribbon rounded out their evening, with Mt. Views Raindrop being pinned in the Amateur Single Roadster Pony Class, driven by Clarence Sweigart.

Wayne® 38% Dari-Blen.

The feed for excellence.

Milkyhill Crystal Jewel Angel—she's classified "excellent" at 91 points. Good breeding, good management and Wayne® 38% Dari-Blen concentrate produced these results:

2-8	363	19,860	4.4%	901
3-10	365	23,356	4.5%	1053

38% Dari-Blen is formulated from as many as six natural protein sources, each having different digestive rates. This provides more protein and extends the milk-making process between feedings. Many herds report 20% greater production. Angel and her herd-mates had a lactation average of 18,234 lbs. and 693 lbs. of fat in early 1979. Take a tip from Milkyhill Crystal Jewel Angel. Ill. swine operation using modified live virus

AUBURN, IL. — Lancaster County and neighboring areas only got a taste of pseudorabies this year compared to some sections of the Midwest.

The large farrow-to-finishing operation of Philip Snell and Son in southern Illinois is one example.

The Snells maintain an average of 680 sows, including about 100 gilts, which are being sorted out for movement into the herd.

"When the pseudorabies got into the herd, we found about 50 percent of the sows aborting," according to Jim Six, herdsman for the Snell operation.

"To control the disease we're using a modified live virus, which is strictly controlled by the state and our veterinarian."

Discussion of the pseudorabies experience, along with review of a solar heating system and a feeding program that features high moisture corn, were highlights of a swine trip of Agway sales personnel to Illinois last week.

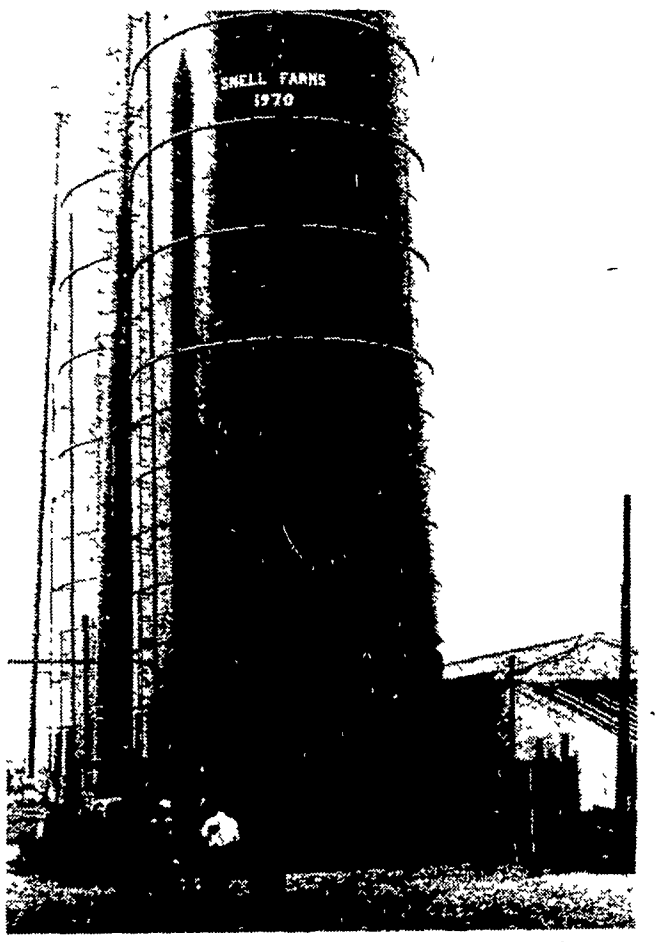
Participating Agway personnel included John Harner, Richard Myer, Francis Strause, Ray Wallace, Robert Weller, Joseph Heeg and Henry Zajac.

The modified live virus being used at the Snell operation is described as not being as virulent or potent as the normal live variety.

The state controls its use and only in cases where pseudorabies has been definitely diagnosed as a serious problem.

"We can't vaccinate any time we want," Six explained.

"Also, we must contact the state each time we sell pigs and it must be to someone who doesn't have sows or doesn't intend to keep sows."



Large Harvestore on the Snell farm at Auburn, Ill. provide mountains of high moisture corn needed for 680-sow operation.

The Snells are also prohibited from selling breeding stock.

The use of the modified live virus is being limited to the sows in the Snell operation. The sows, prior to farrowing, receive two doses. The pigs are not innoculated.

"It's costing us $3 a sow for the innoculations, but that's a lot better than aborting 50 percent of the herd," Six said.

The Snell farm features a hot water copper coil solar collection system in the roof of the nursery and breeding building.

The water is stored in an underground tank area beneath the building workshop and is utilized in conjunction with a backup

Forage Council to mark 20th anniversary

HERSHEY — The Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council will celebrate the 20th Anniversary of its formation with a special two day Forage Conference at the Hershey Convention Center on November 24 and 25.

Offically organized in 1960, PFGC was the first such Council organized in the U.S.

Since that time the council has sponsored or co-sponsored many programs of benefit to Pennsylvania's forage-livestock industry, including Hay & Silage Shows, Forage Progress Days, the Outstanding Grassland Farmer program, Forage Workshop and mostly recently the nationally recognized Alfalfa Growers' Program.

The Conference gets underway Monday morning, November 24 and continues through Tuesday afternoon and includes speakers from many of the 16 States Forage Council's organized during the past 20 years.

The conference will include a special recognition banquet and entertainment Monday evening preceded by a Dairy Punch and Cheese reception sponsored by the State's Dairy Industry.

Plans for the conference includes a special ladies program Monday afternoon and Tuesday. Ladies are also welcome to attend the luncheon and banquet.

The $15 registration fee includes a complete conference proceedings available at the time of registration.

Details on the conference including housing reservation forms are available from the Council's Headquarters c/o Richard Hann, Hershey School Farms, Hershey 17033.

boiler through a system of differential thermostats.

"The system has paid for itself in about three years," Six explained.

"In the winter the system carries about 25 percent of the heat load during the day. It averages out to about 10 to 15 percent of the load throughout the winter. Building temperature is maintained at 85 to 90 degrees.

The Snell feeding program is based on high moisture corn because of the speed in harvesting and silo loading. But this is balanced by the extra labor and management required in its feeding.

The corn is harvested at about 22 to 23 percent moisture. At 25 percent, it's too much trouble to process through the bins and doesn't crack but flours.

The Snells tried a mix-mill system but have essentially abandoned it because of problems in balancing the high moisture corn ration. Now, the mill is used only to crack the corn.

Platform scales are used for weighing such things as vitamins and supplements and a concrete mixer is used to process the ration.

First, soybean meal goes into the ration, followed by the supplements and metered dicalcium phosphate. It's mixed for about five minutes. After the corn is cracked, it is included and mixed for another five minutes.

A bag of rolled oats or colored sawdust is added from time to time to test the mixing. If this system does not prove out, the Snells plan to revert to a batch ribbon mixer.

The Snell operation also includes a herd of about 500 fat cattle.—DA

Cumberland 4-H to run beef and lamb sale

CARLISLE — The 1980 Cumberland County 4-H Beef and Lamb Roundup and Sale will be held on Tuesday, November 11, at the Carlisle Livestock Market. The show will start at 9:30 a.m. and the sale at 8 p.m.

Ten steers and five pairs of lambs will be selected to represent Cumberland County at the 1981 Farm Show. All members will be judged for showmanship, and a champion showman in each age category will be selected. County Champion and Reserve Champion steers will be selected.

A sale champion and reserve champion will be selected from among the 17 steers to be sold at auction Tuesday evening.

Champion and reserve champion market lambs and champion pair of market lambs will be selected and approximately 32 lambs will be sold at auction beginning at 8 p m

There are 32 members in the 4-H Baby Beef Club and 30 members in the Conodoguinet 4-H Sheep Club. These young 4-H'ers are "Learning by Doing". They gain practical experience in animal husbandry, business and economics, and also develop socially.

Buyers of previous years have indicated their satisfaction with the quality of the steers and lambs they purchased. Ribbons and signs to display in a window or on a counter will be available for each buyer. Anyone can purchase a steer or lamb.

This would be a good opportunity to fill your freezer with quality beef and lamb.

Come out to the Carlisle Livestock Market Tuesday, November 11 and support the Cumberland County 4-H Beef and Lamb Clubs.

Ephrata FFA holds annual events

EPHRATA - The Cloister FFA Chapter at the Ephrata High School recently held two annual events.

The first was the Green Hand Initiation at the Ephrata High School auditorium.

Highlights of the evening were a tour of the agriculture department and color slides presented by Mr. Ayers.

The second event was the annual elementary pumpkin contest. Dan Lynch, chairman of the committee announced approximately 80 pumpkins were entered by students throughout the district.

Seeds were provided for each sixth grader last spring and students were encouraged to grow the pumpkins for the fall contest. Each student was permitted to exhibit two pumpkins, one in the heaviest and one in the best shape category.

FFA members served as the official judges.

Winners of the pumpkin contest are as follows:

Lincoln Elementary School

Shape: 1. Vicki Vogel, 857 Fairview Ave. 2. David Metzler, 1207 Marie Ave. 3. Kenny Gunzenhauser, 839 Martin Ave. 4. David Clip-

Farm equipment manufacturers predict good year coming

BOCA RATON, FLA. — Farm equipment manufacturers, who saw sales drop sharply earlier this year, expect demand for their products to improve in 1981. In fact they say there already has been some improvement

Improved farm commodity prices and the strong export demand for U.S. farm commodities were cited as major reasons for a brighter industry outlook in statements prepared for the 87th annual convention of the Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute held here last week.

The Institute is the trade association of the nation's leading farm equipment manufacturers.

"After a difficult first half, we're seeing improvement in some important market categories, such as large two-wheel drive tractors," Roy W. Uelner, executive vice president of the Agricultural Equipment Sector of Allis-Chalmers Corporation and current Chairman of the FIEI, said. "We expect the agricultural equipment market to grow in the late 1980 and that growth to extend into 1981."

"Our expectations for improved retail demand in 1981 are based in large part on the recent strengthening of crop and livestock prices," Chairman Willim A. Hewitt of Deere & Company said. "Because of the higher prices it now appears farm cash receipts this year will reach a new high of $140 billion and improve to at least $150 billion in 1981."

Uelner, Hewitt, and Ben Warren, president of International Harvester's Agricultural Equipment Group, all called attention to the strong exports of farm commodities. Exports are expected to reach a new record high of $40 billion this year, up from $32 billion in 1979.

How much of an increase will there be in farm equipment demand?

International Harvester's Warren estimated retail unit sales of farm equipment in the United States should rebound 10 to 15 percent in 1981 but still be below 1979's high levels.

He said the upward movement in interest rates could slow the rate of recovery. He added that the profit squeeze on farmers "is another factor indicating a more gradual resurgence of equipment demand."

Estimates of next year's improved demand by other key industry executives ranged from five to 15 percent.

James H. Grommersch, assistant general manager of Ford Tractor Operations, said farm tractor sales have begun to recover somewhat from the depressed levels experienced earlier in 1980 and "improved economic prospects for 1981 lead us to expect a recovery in tractor sales of between five to 10 percent next year."

Horace G. McCarty, president of Sperry New Holland, said "we expect farm machinery unit sales to climb nine percent above this year's level."

"How big the rebound will be is anybody's guess, but 10 to 15 percent is likely and possible," R.W. Engle, vice president and general manager of Avco New Idea Farm Equipment Division, said.

Jerome K. Green, president of J.I. Case Company, said that despite considerably improved tractor sales in the second half of this year, total 1980 tractor sales are expected to be off by 15 percent. He went on to predict, "improved sales levels are expected to continue through 1981 boosting North American tractor sales approximately 10 percent from this year's level."

Howard L. Brenneman, president of Hesston Corporation, said sales next year should be "between the levels experienced in 1970 and the low levels of 1980."

Massey-Ferguson's Darwin G. Kettering, who heads the firm's North American operations, said "We believe the farm machinery market has turned the corner, with sales moving back toward favorable levels during 1981."

Peter Perkins, vice president of FMC Corporation, said "We see the agricultural equipment business as being four to five percent better in 1981 than 1980. General agriculture looks good, not excellent but good for next year."

William J. Jensen, senior vice president of Butler Manufacturing Company's agricultural equipment group, said "higher prices for most commodities will provide an improved cash flow and more optimistic outlook for the agricultural equipment market." He said high grain prices, as a result of drought-reduced production, will cause grain to move out of storage, lowering the demand for on-farm storage. He said drying equipment will experience a similar sluggish demand.

Joseh L. Driscoll, president of The Empire Plow Company, said "the tillage equipment segment of the farm equipment business for 1981 should be good."

Robert N. Spolum, president of Clark Equipment's Melroe Division, said "the overall outlook for the 1981 farm equipment business is a moderate improvement over 1980."

J.E. Hardy, president of Brinly-Hardy Company, said "we believe farm equipment sales will recover to some extent in the spring of 1981, but unless exports of farm products are increased, we expect surpluses to develop in the fall of 1981 and during 1982."

John E. Love, president of the J.E. Love Company, said he expects the second half of 1981 to bring "increased product demand at an accelerating pace that may strain our industry's rapid reaction capabilities."

Local breeders to compete

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Several local livestock breeders will be traveling to Louisville next month to compete in the 1980 North Americana International Livestock Exposition, scheduled for November 8-22.

Mrs. J.C. Strawbridge, Stewartstown, has entered 13 head of market hogs in the competition.

Two local shepherds will also be competiting. Barbara Rohrer, Quarryville, will be showing two head of Southdown sheep, and William J. MacCauley, Atglen, will be showing his entry in the Suffolk division.

Held at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center, The North American International Livestock Exposition is entering its seventh consecutive year this season. Those who compete will vie for more than $250,000 in total premiums and awards.

Beef cattle, dairy cattle, swine, Quarter Horses and sheep will be shown during the two-week Exposition, show manager, Harold Workman said entries this year promise to break the show record at 12,000 or more.

Miller family wins Reading Fair honors

BY LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

FLEETWOOD — Surely October 16th, 1980 will hold special memories for years to come for a certain family of Berks County.

It was on this evening during the Reading Fair Banquet that Carl Miller and family were named the 1980 Reading Fair Farm Family.

The Millers operate Mirl-Carl Farms, Kutztown, a family owned and operated farm consisting of approximately 500 acres owned and 1300 acres rented, and a dairy in which 330 cows presently are being milked.

The Millers were selected as the outstanding farm family by the Berks County Pomona Grange.

To be eligible for selection the family must be an active member of a subordinate grange in the county. In the Millers case this grange is the Virginville Grange.

Miller has been with the grange his entire life, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Miller, being charter members. He and his wife, Marilyn, have earned all of the degrees with the grange as has his daughter and her husband, Carlene and Nelson Blatt. Miller has been an officer of the Virginville Grange for fifteen straight years and has also been a consistor at Windsor Castle United Church of Christ for twenty years.

Carlene and Nelson were named the State Grange Outstanding Young Couple previously this year. Other children of the Millers are: Diane, wife of Bill Dietrich; Bonnie, wife of Michael Gehringer; Candy, wife of Donald Walton; Tammy 11, and Jeffrey, 23.

The Millers also have eleven grandchildren, six boys and five girls, increasing the size of the family to 23 members. Miller remarked that the farm has always been a family operation since 1959 when he started farming with his grandfather. Miller rented a farm at first, purchasing the home farm in 1962, and gradually expanding the operation ever since.

Today the Millers have six family employees, other then themselves. His son, Jeffrey manages the dairy, three daughters also help and do the milking and two son-in-laws are employed full time. Walton as a shop mechanic where 95 percent of the farm machinery repairs including overhauling is done, and Gehringer is a field hand.

Miller is general manager overseeing the entire family enterprise and operates the large machinery when possible and Marilyn handles the bookkeeping. Approximatley 730 acres of corn are grown, 450 acres of alfalfa, and 200 acres of small grains.

All of the dairy feed is raised on the farm with the

Lebanon Co. names Outstanding 4-H'ers

Lebanon County 4-H named two Outstanding 4-H'ers at the County 4-H Achievement Night held Thursday, October 16 in Mount Zion.

Sue Bomberger, Annville and Beth Ann Shiner, Myerstown, received the county honor, the highest awarded, based on the quality and range of their 4-H activities in the past years.

According to Linda Rohrbach, Extension 4-H Agent, recognizing the achievements of these 4-H'ers serves at least two purposes. "Sue and Beth Ann and their families know that their work is well-done. Also, though, recognizing 4-H'ers provides incentive, a goal, for younger members to strive for. We always keep the motto, 'To Make the Best Better', in mind that way."

Beth Ann and Michelle Noll, Lebanon, were named as Keystone winners in the Outstanding 4-H'er category. Their 4-H records are being considered for state honors in that category.

Also recognized were Honor 4-H'ers. This award, started just this year, gives young members a chance to be honored for their records. "We're hoping to build a stronger, happier county ...be ship through these honors for our newer members," says Linda.

Honor 4-H'ers and their age category: 8 year olds - Jeff Wagner, Mark Fake, and Jesse Pyles; 9 year olds - Sharon Yeakley, Jennifer Allwein, Eric Brandt; 10 year olds - Sharon Wagner, Karen Cram, Regina Roof; 11 year olds - Melanie Bow, Susan Brandt, Darrin Showers; 12 year olds - Sylvia Royer and Cindy Yeakley.

Winner of the county award for Outstanding Community Service by a club was the Palmyra Cougars, who conducted a recycling effort. Honorable mention went to Annville Little Dutchmen (playground cleanup) and Rexmont Rangers (litter cleanup).

Club Outstanding 4-H'ers were announced. They were: Greg Allwein, Norsolebco; Sylvia Royer, Annville Little Dutchmen; Cindy Yeakley, Annville Little Dutchmen; Mel Keller, Hoof & Horns; Dawn Dohner, Hoof & Horns; Hope Reyner, Palm Trailblazers; Brett Eberly, Fort Zellers; Sharon Saam, Equestrians; Sue Bomberger, South Mountain; Holly Bachert, 4-H Samplers; Nicole Emrich, Bellegrove Clovers; Birdena Donough, Palmyra Cougars; Fawn Showers, Rexmont Rangers; Diane Smith, Rexmont Rangers; Erik Silldorff, Bug Baggers; Jon Fetter, Bug Baggers; Janet Brandt, Avon-East Lebanon; and Jodi Kreider, Avon-East Lebanon.

Diane Maulfair, 4-H member, presented a plaque to John Balmer for his leadership of the Lebanon Area Fair in the past ten years. The Fair provides an opportunity for area 4-H and FFA youth to learn showmanship, quality workmanship, and sportsmanship.

A $250 college scholarship was presented to Tom Smith, member of the NoSoAnn Dairy Club. Smith is a freshman at Delaware Valley College, majoring in Dairy Husbandry. Marianne Weary presented the scholarship on behalf of People's Bank.

Dan Shiner, Myerstown, presented a demonstration, "Energy - Only You Can Save It." He received the State Award for engineering demonstrations in August.

A humorous educational skit, "Sadie and Matilda Go Shopping," was presented by Fawn Shoers and Diane Smith. The skit teaches consumer skills.

Humorous awards highlighted some of the fun things that happen at 4-H events. The Spaghetti Tester Award recognized Teen Weekend chaperones, Dick Kreider and John Allwein, for their unusual cooking ability.

The event was planned by exception of concentrates. The dairy herd is fed a majority of haylage and supplemented with their own feed mix. Heifers and dry cows are fed mainly hay from some of the approximately 425-1500-pound bales made each year.

The best alfalfa is reserved for the milking cows. Almost all feeding is mechanized.

Mirl-Carl Farms ships about 300,000 pounds of milk per month to Lehigh Valley Farms, and has a fat test of 3.85.

"We don't try to feed too heavy or push our cows," Miller commented.

All heifer calves are raised and once in a while one or two are purchased.

Last Autumn the Millers installed a new milking parlor consisting of a double eight herring bone. Milking time usually takes four hours. All of the Miller children started milking when about six or seven years old and continued until they married.

After a "leave of absence" for a while all the girls have returned and are still milking. Presently Miller's older grandchildren are beginning to follow the tradition of their parents and like to be about at the barn during milking.

Miller has a goal of milking 400 cows and presently has the capability to do so. There are seven Harvestores erected on the farm and two stave silos as well. There is approximately 220 head of young stock on the farm.

The Millers also produce enough field crops for marketing such as corn, wheat, straw and hay.

Also selected and introduced during the Reading Fair Awards Banquet, held at the Fleetwood Grange, here were the Outstanding 4-H Boy and Girl and Outstanding FFA Boy and FHA Girl.

Honored with these awards were: 4-H Girl - Cheryl Adam, 18, of Hamburg; 4-H Boy - Keith Shollenberger, 18, of Hamburg; FFA Boy - Howard Greist, 18, Honey Brook; and FHA Girl - twin sisters Linda and Michelle Schroeder, 19, of Bowmansville.

Speaking before the audience gathered to honor the award winners was Assistant Director of the Secretary of Agriculture Dean Heim. Heim said he feels Secretary Hallowell is the best agriculture secretary of all time.

"We are here to protect and serve you" Heim stated. "We are trying to serve you not only as farmers but as taxpayers also," he continued to explain.

Heim urged the support of agricultural product promotions especially Pennsylvania produced products. He also told the audience to help change the image the consumer has of the farmer, as always in bib overalls.

"It's time we took a stand and promoted agriculture," he stated.

The Milk Check

TOM JURCHAK
County Agent

RIGHT DIRECTION

If you're interested in higher prices, Order 2 producers certainly went in the right direction in September. You cut production one per cent under August on a daily basis. You increased your Class I sales over 10 per cent to give you a Class I utilization of 47.8 per cent - the best so far this year.

Children going back to school in the Fall always boost fluid sales in September over August. But you even did much better than last September by 19 million pounds in spite of producing the most milk for September since 1965.

You shipped a whopping 825 million pounds last month - a far cry from the 993 million pounds you sold in May. For your usual seasonal decline in production and an increase in Class I utilization, you will get a 30 cent increase over August and find a uniform price of $13.31 for September milk shipped to Order 2 handlers.

OTHER REASONS

It's nice to give you credit for the increase, but there were a few other items that helped you to get the 30 cent increase that you should keep in mind.

An important one was a 17 cent increase in your Class II price over August that came out of the 21 cent increase in the Minnesota-Wisconsin price between August and September.

Taking that back another step - you got the M-W increase from the increasing demand for butter, powder and cheese during September. This happened because buyers knew the support prices for these products would be increased on October 1 so they bought ahead.

This increase in the M-W, which was the highest in six months, will be reflected in your Class I price in November.

Getting back to September prices, you also had a five cent increase in Class I milk and a nine cent jump in your Louisville Plan pay back.

So, putting them all together the increases in class prices and your Louisville Plan pay back provided about 20 cents of your 30 cent increase and the other 10 cents came from a better Class I utilization.

Anyway, you're heading in the right direction.

Just remember that there are two ways to increase your blend price. One is by increasing Class I sales - which has its limits. And the other is by reducing production - which isn't very popular.

Two new editors to join Pa. Holstein News

STATE COLLEGE — To better serve Holstein breeders of Pennsylvania the Pennsylvania Holstein Association and the "Pennsylvania Holstein News" have begun a new chapter in their 24-year-old relationship.

Effective with the November issue, Pennsylvania Holstein Association staff members John Howard, Michael Weimer and Douglas Hershey have been named Field Editors of the News. As Field Editors the Holstein Association staff members will be writing reports of sales, shows and other Holstein activities throughout the Keystone State.

They will also be assisting breeders in the preparation of advertising and are available as advertising consultants.

The addition of three editors living in Pennsylvania and working out of the State College office of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association is one of the most significant developments in news coverage since the magazine's inception in August 1956.

The Pennsylvania Holstein News is published by the Holstein Friesian World, Inc.

KNIGHT

"250" MANURE SPREADER

Built to handle more than 7 tons of manure, the Knight #250 is the ideal spreader for medium size operations The low profile allows easy maneuvering under the barn cleaner and the 5' width provides for no-spill loading The rugged frame and all steel welded construction means you can haul those big loads over rough ground without worry The special copper bearing steel box resists corrosion due to weather and manure acids. Frozen and solid manure are easily handled by the advance design auger beater with alloy steel "ripper" teeth The worm gear drive is smoother in operation and creates less drive system stress The top beater is standard equipment on the #250 The optional hydrofluid endgate and 4" x 4" rails lock in that sloppy manure and prevent unwanted spillage Feature for feature the Knight is your best buy.

Now ... move big volumes fast with 2 new big-capacity International® spreaders

If you have a lot of manure to haul and spread throughout the year, we have some good news for you . . two big-capacity, high-strength spreaders.

The 595 has a heaped capacity of 343 cu. ft, the 575 a heaped capacity of 271 cu. ft. Here's capacity to make short work of your biggest spreading jobs, capacity that will give you more time for other jobs. Both models have tandem wheels on bogie-type axles to help ease heavy loads over rough ground at fast spreading speeds.

Finance plans available.

For smaller spreading jobs, IH offers you the 550, 540, and 530 spreaders with single axles and heaped capacities from 148 to 216 cu ft. They have many of the design features you'll find in the larger sizes.

- Bear Claw beaters for good shredding and spreading action
- Beveled worm gear for long life of the drive components.
- Penta-treated ¾" plywood floors.
- Rust-resistant steel sides (guaranteed to the original owner for the life of the spreader).

TORQUE AMPLIFIER, CLUTCH & WATER PUMP PARTS & SERVICE

Rebuilt TA assemblies for IH tractors from SMTA through 1586. Water pumps, Dyna-Life clutches and pressure plates from A, B, C through 1586 and for many of the combines, 101 - 303 through the 915.

If you are operating a shop or are a farmer who does his own mechanical work, then you will do well to compare the parts which I have to offer. Complete rebuilt TA assemblies for 706 - 1586 are priced from $525.00 and come with a Dana Co. heavy Duty Sprag clutch instead of the usual IH sprag. These TA units are being installed in many of the leading IH shops across the country instead of the IH units.

Also have available assorted parts for TA's which are not available individually through new parts at IH. I am prepared to do complete installation at competitive prices and will match any guarantee that is offered on TA units or rebuilt clutches, pressure plates & water pumps. I will also install original factory parts on request.

For a no obligation estimate or for information and references write or call me.

GUNITE Silo Relining & Repairs

Extensive tests have been conducted on Gunite Below are some of the properties of Gunite
1. Excellent bonding
2. High Density
3. Extreme strength and hardness
4. High resistance to absorption

The excellent physical properties of the material are due to the water content being only the amount needed to satisfy chemical hydration

Reseal and re-strengthen your silo with Gunite

FORAGE HANDLING EQUIPMENT BY BADGER NORTHLAND!

Forage is a major feedstuff in your livestock operation. That's why it's so important to handle it properly. saving every bit of its nutrient value to produce milk and meat

Badger Northland builds its line of forage handling equipment to help you attain that goal. Each piece of Badger equipment is designed to perform efficiently and with minimum maintenance

It's also backed by the best dealer parts and service network in the industry If you're considering purchasing a new forage box, blower or mower/conditioner, see your Badger Dealer and

Talk to the man who knows

Badger Boxes keep on working long after others have worn out.

When it comes to forage boxes, nothing can beat a Badger Box Badger builds its own boxes right in Kaukauna, Wisconsin where they maintain rigid quality control

A Badger Box is built with channel side stakes for extra strength and specially treated, exterior grade plywood to resist acids corrosion, and rot The bolted undercarriage and chain drive are designed to take the toughest punishment

And Badger Boxes hold their value At trade-in time many Badger owners are surprised to see their box worth as much as when they bought it new

They haven't built a silo that the Badger Northland Blower can't fill.

No matter how high or how big the Badger Blower can fill em all

It s simply the least costly to operate smoothest running toughest blower you can buy

The Badger Blower can operate at 540-650 r p m s It will take anything you give it forage or grain (with little or no cracking) It ll blow the highest tonnage with the lowest h p And the special Badger magnet catches foreign material before it catches you

Get together with your Badger Dealer today and get ready to fill your big silo

Take it all off with a Badger Northland Mower/Conditioner!

Even in the toughest of conditions, the Badger Mower/Conditioner will perform its "clean cutting" duties like no other, without over conditioning

The Badger Mower/Conditioner will run longer with fewer "u" joints and its adjustable transmission gives great maneuverability Row width can also be adjusted See what it's like to own a mower/conditioner that will spend more time in the field than it does in the shop

Farm Women fight "the dump"

NORTH CODORUS TOWNSHIP — "You go between being extremely angry and extremely scared. There's just no in-between."

With those words, Stacy Marsh, Seven Valleys R1 farm wife, recently summed up the emotional trauma that continues to grip farm families of York County's North Codorus Township.

For these rural women, whose lives center around the planting and harvesting of the undulating contours of wheat, corn, and hay, the Summer of '80 will remain forever in their memories, an indelible nagging fear.

It was the year of "the dump".

"The dump" controversy surrounds a several-hundred acre ridge that slices through the township, much of which is now farmed, just as it is to be when the industrial waste disposal sites are filled. Some of those crops are growing even now over covered trenches that once held sanitary solid landfill wastes.

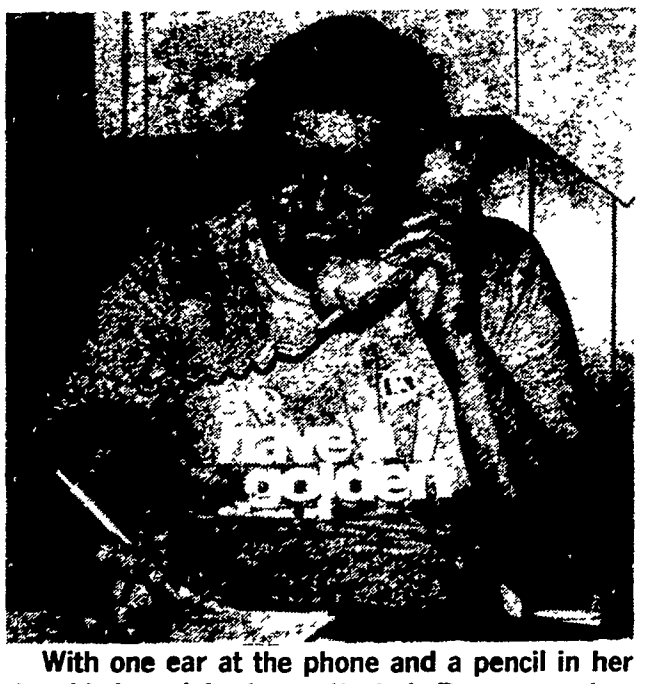
Sunny Farms Ltd., which owns the land and operated the former landfill, has been granted a DER permit to use parts of the acreage for the underground vaulting of potentially hazardous industrial wastes. Stabatrol, Inc., has since purchased the corporate assets of Sunny Farms, and a legal question has arisen over the validity of the permit transfer.

To the farmers who take their living and their life-sustaining water supplies from the area's abundant springs and streams that tumble from the hillsides and gurgle along the pastures, the proposed dump remains a scary "what if" threat.

What if the "fail-safe' soil-cement enclosures cracked and leaked? What if supposedly non-soluble toxic substances leaked into water supplies? What if family and livestock became diseased? What if the ability to produce was taken from the fertile farms?

Putting anger into action, farm families took the lead in this classic skirmish against governmental agencies and vague bureaucratic dictates. From the beginning, a few dedicated, determined and mad farm women have been leaders in research, garnishing public support and personal and phone contacts.

MAD they call themselves. MAD is short for Mothers Against the Dump, and states in a single meaning how they feel about the whole issue.



With one ear at the phone and a pencil in her hand is how dairy farm wife Judy Brenneman has spent many hours in the past several weeks. That's been her way of helping to gather and relay information for the fight against an industrial waste disposal facility slated on property bordering the Brenneman farm.

Like most mothers, they'd been involved in community activities before, things like PTA, fire company auxiliaries, church groups. But none had dabbled in anything so politically heated as battling private corporate concerns armed with permits obtained, these women insist, under questionable circumstances.

The uphill fight of these farmwomen has been an eye-opening education, an unpaid vocation, and at times, perhaps even a little bit of inspiration.

"Our phones ring 25 hours a day," wryly observes Judy Brenneman, who operates a 50-head, 500-acre dairy and crops farm near Spring Grove with her husband Nelson and their six children.

Most of the farm chores are under the care of Judy and eldest son, Nelson, Jr., since Brenneman is involved in fact-finding and the numerous public meetings scheduled by the dump opposition.

That also leaves Judy as the relay person for information as the leaders of the citizens groups opposing the disposal site pursue leads and contacts, and exchange finds. As the dump battle has grown, so has the frustration of those, like the Brennemans, whose land adjoins the proposed dumping sites.

"You just don't think of anything else," Judy laments, lines of concern furrowing her brow. "Whenever anyone stops in at the house, that's all we talk about."

The ever-present nervous tension that's accompanied the dump proposal is taking its toll of most of the nearby farm families, she's noticed. They're alert every minute, watching for strange vehicles that come and go, or that turn around on the roads that border and crisscross the Sunny Farms acreage. Rumors of illegal "midnight" visits by trucks occasionally have been hinted at.

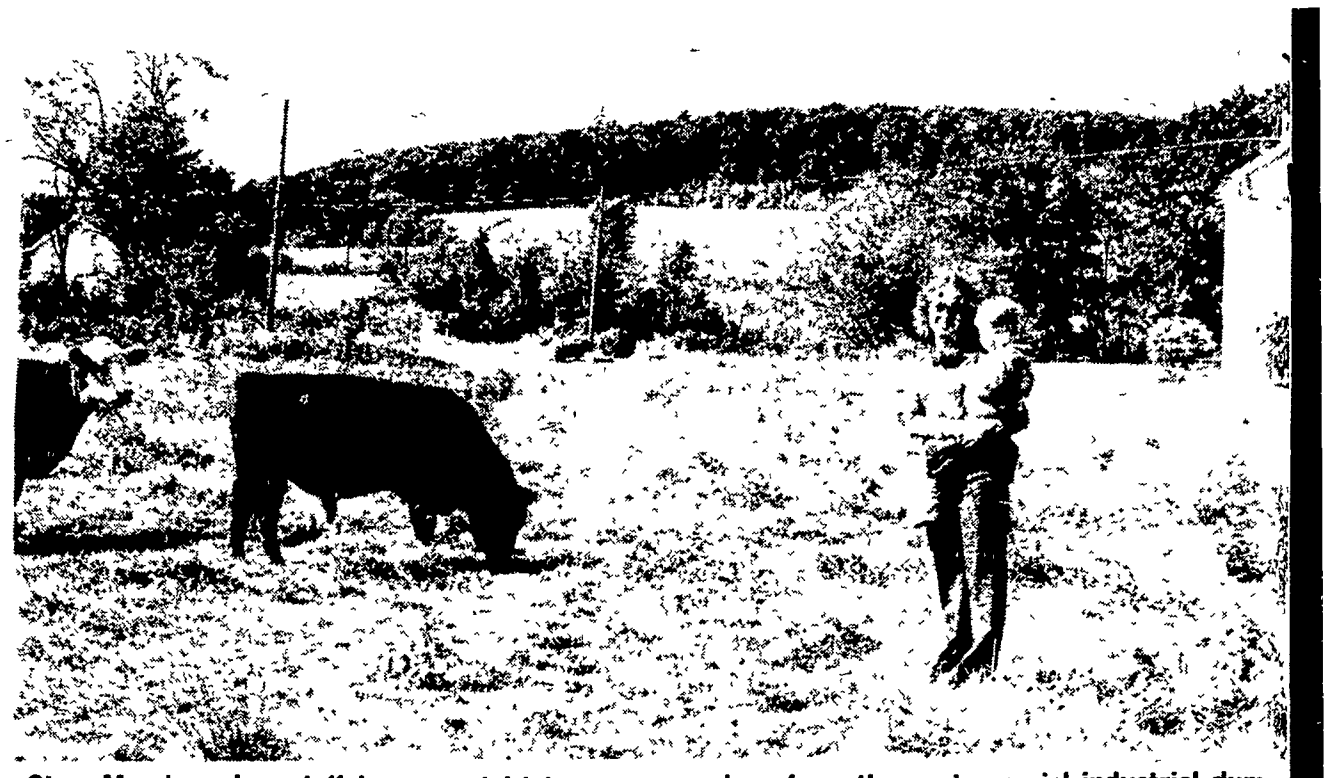
Once, through a jammed schedule of meeting commitments and dairy farm regular chores, a supply of insulin for one of the Brenneman children who's a diabetic, ran dangerously low.

Even an upcoming trip that the family had planned may have to be scrapped, with vacation time and funds instead used to battle the dump proposal.

An awareness of the health and economic damage tied to leaking toxic chemical wastes at New York's Love Canal is seldom far from the minds of the North Codorus families, Judy admits. In fact, a television documentary on the problem played a unifying role in the initial organizing against the planned disposal sites.

"I can't remember when we first heard of the dump plans," Donna Lecrone says, shaking her head. Donna and Mike Lecrone own a section of the valley located at the foot of part of the planned vaulting area. Runoff water from the ridge often pours down into the stream that marks the line between their pasture and that of Sunny Farms. A part of the 63 acres of the Seven Valleys R1 farm is planted in neat rows of young fruit trees and a long poultry house filled with 8,000 chunky hybrid laying hens

Using an established, if somewhat militant, approach guaranteed to attract publicity and generate support against the dump, women of MAD picketed City Hall in downtown York. Judy, Stacy and Donna display some of their attention-getting signs.



Stacy Marsh, and son Jeff, keep a watchful eye on their beef cattle, grazing the pasture that lays down a slope from the controversial industrial dump site hillside.

Homestead Notes

providing eggs to the Longenecker Hatchery at Elizabethtown.

Soon after the Lecrone's heard that they might soon border an industrial waste site, Donna and Mike hosted a small group of farm neighbors to view the TV showing of "The Killing Ground." Its sobering report detailed numerous old chemical dumpsites scattered across the nation, including Love Canal, where toxic materials continuing to seep from the ground have contaminated the environment.

Ruined water supplies and damaged plant life are symptoms of the leaking chemicals, but scientists now fear the much greater damage already showing up in related health problems, birth defects and possible links to unknow, long-term genetic effects.

Steve and Stacy Marsh, next-farm neighbors to the Lecrone's, were among the group that watched the television documentary with mounting worry.

In the days that followed, a plan of opposition began to emerge, finally taking shape in the form of OUCH, Opposing Unnecessary Chemical Hazards. Steve Marsh was asked to head OUCH as their chairman.

OUCH hired a Harrisburg attorney specializing in environmental problems and set out to search for hard facts to show that the industrial waste permit had been granted without thorough consideration of the long-range impact on the farmland valleys that surround the site. Their immediate goal was to generate public awareness, and mass support at a public meeting with DER, if the agency would agree to hold one.

For the women of the farmhouses nestled in the valleys, it would mean hours of telephone contacts, meetings with officials and corporate representatives, and studying countless folders of public documents.

One of Donna Lecrone's first research visits took her to the York County Historical Society. There she found an 1857 map which detailed the valley's then thriving iron ore mining industry, including locations of long-forgotten shafts. That map proved to be a piece of valuable background material, which DER officials later admitted they had not included in their thorough geological studies of the site made before granting the permit.

Stacy and Donna were among a handful of people who made numerous trips to Harrisburg, spending days poring over agency documents, records and letters. Much of the time was spent at the regional and central offices of DER, as well as at the Federal Building and the Geological Survey offices.

Trip after trip, the researchers would return home with copies of papers, trying to fit together bits of a puzzle that still lacked too many pieces to be clearly understood.

"We'd see a set of plans here, and then another set of plans there. Nothing seemed to fit," they remembered.

(Turn to Page C11)

Oblivious to the heated battle over the North Codorus dump proposal, hens in the Lecrone's hatchery laying house continued their daily egg output. Here Donna snatches a few minutes away from her involvement with MAD and OUCH to check the nests.

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Co. Society 8

Farm Women's Society 8 met at the home of Alice Myers, R1, Mount Joy, October 18. Kathryn Heisey, the president, was in charge.

Because Columbus Day was observed recently, Kathryn Erb gave many thoughts on how our country and government reaches out to other peoples and nations.

The seventeen members answered roll call by saying why each was glad to be an American.

Four members, Vera Frey, Hettie Ginder, Sylvia Warfel and Elizabeth Shuman sewed at the General Hospital earlier in the month. Many items were mended plus 195 new pieces were made.

The nominating committee gave the names of Kathryn Erb for president and Arline Witman for vice president to assume duties in the next year.

Vera Cox gave an illustrated talk on Russia as she and her husband have observed culture in that country. Among many other sights, they saw many large buildings, some with onion top domes, Cathedrals, the University of Moscow, and the Olympic building.

In Ukraine they saw the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, the Botanical Gardens and an opera. They saw cobblestone streets and an art gallery there also.

November 1 is the date for the convention at the Farm and Home Center.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Phyllis Endslow, R1 Marietta on November 15. This will be a musical program.

Lancaster Co. Society 12

Lancaster Society of Farm Women 12 held their October meeting at the home of Ethel Kindig, Millersville.

A collection of articles and money were taken for the Needlework Guild of Lancaster.

Election of officers are as follows: president, Karen Hoffer; vice president, Rhoda Hess; secretary, Dorothy Sangsey; treasurer, Mildred Kindig.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Irene Fry, Washington Boro on November 15.

Lancaster Co. Society 13

Lancaster Farm Women met October 10 at the home of Mrs. Nettie Bare, Witmer, with Mrs. Susanna Reitzel as co-hostess.

Members answered roll call by telling who was president when they were born.

Election of officers was held with the followig being elected: president, Mrs. Laura Denlinger; vice president, Mrs. Dorothy Landis; recording secretary, Mrs. Ethel Landis; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edith Gehman; and treasurer, Mrs. Susanna Reitzel.

Two new members were received, Mrs. Joanne Ganse and Mrs. Ruth Ziegler.

Plans were made for the food stand to be held November 1 at Mrs. John Miller's sale.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ada Bomberger, New Holland, on November 14.

Lancaster Co. Society 14

Lancaster Society of Farm Women 14 met at the home of Mrs. Arthur Groff, Lime Valley Road, Lancaster.

Donations were given to United Way and the Water Street Mission.

Guest speaker was James D. Beissel.

The next meeting will be held November 12 at the home of Mrs. Melvin Stoltzfus, Glendale Drive, Lancaster.

Lancaster Co. Society 32

Lancaster Society 32 held their October meeting in the basement of the Chiques Church of the Brethern, Manheim. There were 16 members, 4 new members and 2 guests present.

After an introduction of new members and guests the members were urged to attend the county convention.

Following the meeting, the members were led in a workshop by Mrs. Mary Sweigart from Mount Joy. She showed everyone how to make a corn husk doll. A display of hand made crafts, fruits, and flowers were arranged for the group.

The next meeting will be held November 13 at Witmers Greenhouses. Members will be meeting at Chiques Chruch promptly at 7 p.m.

Lebanon Co. Society 5

Lebanon Farm Women 5 met at Kimmerling's Grange Hall, October 14, to hear Lee Rentchler of the Fredericksburg Fire Co. speak on fire prevention.

Twenty-three members were present.

President Marion Maulfair was in charge of the business session. Minerva Lentz announced that the group received a very good response to the Charity Bazaar at the Plaza on September 12 and 13.

The state convention will be on January 12, 1981 at the forum in Harrisburg.

The spring rally is scheduled for May 21 at Dickinson College.

The Group will be taking a secnic trip through the valley along the Susquehanna on October 23.

The next meeting will be a quilting party on November 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Vera Fahnestock of Jonestown, R1.

Beef club meets

SEVEN VALLEYS — The York County 4-H Beef Club held their monthly meeting at Warrington Green farm, hosted by Tammy, James, and Susan Eisenhour.

The Baby Beef Round Up and Sale will be held on Wednesday, November 5 at the Thomasville Auction.

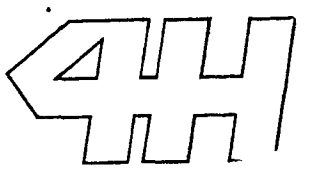
Judging of the show will start at 9 a.m. and the sale will be held at 4 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Members decided to have the Baby Beef Banquet again this year. The date and place will be announced at a later date.

The club donated $100 of which is to be split by the Livestock Judging team and the Meats Judging team. Both teams are going to compete in national competition in November.

Also donated was $100 to the Thomasville Livestock Auction for the twenty desk chairs.

After the meeting, was a hayride and a hot dog roast.



Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

I simply dread the thought of that first morning after a hard frost when I must look at my dead garden.

At the present time all 5000 square feet of it is green and lush. The one hundred foot long row of dwarf dahlias are blooming profusely and I have flowers to share. I'm having trouble deciding whether or not to dig and store all those tubers in addition to my many baskets of sweet potatoes.

Another job that awaits me is an accumulation of green walnuts which I must hull by hand. This year I wasn't going to pick any up as there are a few remaining from two years ago. But when I go down in the meadow to check on a cow with a new calf and see those big balls of green, I can't resist drying some more.

The problem is that I know it will be my job to find the time to crack them and then use them in cakes and cookies. Guess it's better than leaving them lay and buying some at the store though.

My husband has gleaned most of the corn this year. Some was run down when he filled the three silos and some was run down by big trucks when heavier wires were strung from the three high voltage towers that cross our farm.

All of the truck traffic didn't help our alfalfa fields either. Although, I did get some good pictures of them on their orange aerial ladder against a very blue sky.

The few times I helped to pick up corn made me appreciate what Allen meant when he said his back ached from the work. Our geese should be well fed this winter when they come to the barn for corn.

Hunting season will soon be here and there appears to be an abundance of rabbits and squirrels in the woods and fields around here. I'm sure we'll also have an abundance of hunters.

Trick or treat surprise

When trick or treaters stop at your home for their goodies, you want to be prepared and have lots of delicious treats for them.

Here are recipes for everyone's favorite - peanut butter cookies. You will also find some rich fudge and brownies. If you're feeling really creative, why not try soft pretzels or marshmallow treats? Have you ever seen a child turn them down?

Also let's remember how cold it gets on Halloween night. Wouldn't the children in your neighborhood like to stop in for some warm refreshments?

We have two pleasing home-baked treats you can do with surprisingly little effort if you plan ahead. One is a buttery Cinnamon Loaf, lightly frosted with Orange Icing; the other is a brand new version of an old Southern favorite, Bacon-Cheddar Corn Pones.

Children will love them both. Their best accompaniment is a cup of hot chocolate covered with marshmallows.

Serve your Cinnamon Loaf and Corn Pones still warm from the oven if your schedule permits, or make them the day before, cover and store. Have butter on the table, too, so you and your guests can spread it on the tender slices of cinnamon bread and the crusty pones.

If you've never baked yeast bread, this loaf is a good one with which to begin. The recipe is easy to follow, and that tricky-looking cinnamon swirl is simple. Just roll the dough like a jelly roll, with a sugar and spice layer twirled inside. This recipe makes 2 loaves, so you cna serve one to the visitors and keep the other for a family breakfast or brunch.

Here are two delicious home-baked treats you can do with little effort for hungry trick-or-treaters. Children will love stopping at your house for a warm treat of Cinnamon Loaf and Corn Pones.

WHITE FUDGE

2 boxes of 10x Sugar
1 can carnation milk
¼ lb. butter or oleo

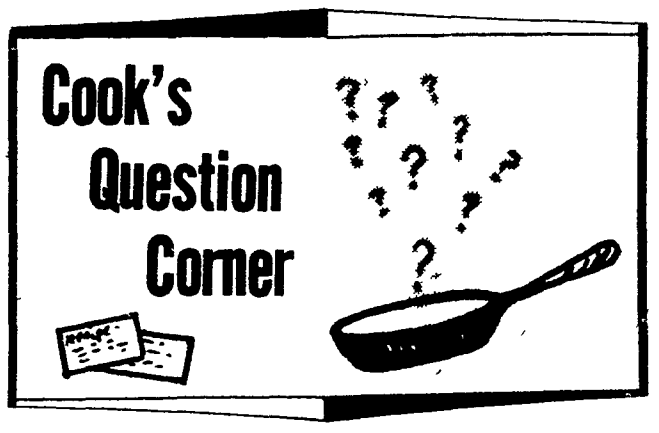
Mix all ingredients together and cook 12 minutes. Then take off of stove and add: 1-12 oz. jar of peanut butter, 1-12 oz. jar of marshmallow cream.

Mrs. Glenn R. Love, East Waterford

CHOCOLATE CANDY

3 tablespoon peanut butter
1 small pkg. chocolate chips

Melt, then let it cool, add 3 cups corn flakes then mix.



QUESTION - Does anyone have a recipe for pan pizza? I would like to know how to make the dough from scratch.

Anna Steele, R1, Box 210, Sussex, N.J.

QUESTION - I am wondering if there is anyone who might know if there is a way to freeze whole or sliced potatoes. Would they please share the directions for processing them?

Debra Fahnestock, R2, Box 92, Newport, PA

ANSWER - Ladies, Joan McGuigan asked for a recipe for apple dumplings in our October 11 issue. You will find her answer at the end of this issue's recipes.

CINNAMON LOAF

2 packages active dry yeast
¼ cup warm water
1 cup milk
½ cup (1 stick) butter
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 eggs
6 cups flour
¼ cup (½ stick) butter, melted
⅓ cup sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Heat milk to scalding; add butter, sugar and salt. Cool slightly. Mix in eggs, yeast and 3 cups flour; beat well. Add remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead until smooth and elastic, about 10 minutes. Place in buttered bowl, cover and set in warm place to rise until doubled, about 2 hours. Then, punch down, divide dough in half and knead each portion until smooth. Roll into 2 rectangles about 6 inches wide and ¼ inch thick. Brush each with melted butter (about 1 ½ tablespoons).

Mix together sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg; sprinkle about 2 tablespoons over each rectangle. Roll dough as for a jelly roll. Place in 2 buttered loaf pans 9 by 5 by 3 inch, brush tops with butter. Let rise until doubled. Sprinkle tops of loaves with remaining cinnamon mixture; bake in preheated 375 degree oven 45 minutes. Remove from pans and cool on wire rack. Makes 2 loaves. If desired, one of loaves may be iced with the following Orange Icing.

1 cup confectioners sugar
2 tablespoons frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed

Stir together sugar and orange concentrate until smooth; spread over leaf.

SOFT PRETZELS

2 tablespoons yeast
6 teaspoons granulated sugar pinch of salt
8 to 10 cups bread flour
butter as needed

Dissolve yeast in ½ cup warm water, then stir in two cups of warm water. Add sugar and salt. Beat in flour to make a very stiff dough. Spread with butter. Let rise 45 minutes or until double in size. Shape into pretzels. Let rise for a few minutes. Bring one quart of water to boiling and add four teaspoons of baking soda. Drop these pretzels in at a time. Boil one minute. Remove and drain. Let stand for 5 minutes; place on buttered cookie sheets. Bake at 475°F. for 12 minutes. Sprinkle with pretzel salt before baking.

Ruth K. Stoltzfus, RD2, Limeville

BROWNIE DROP COOKIES

Cookies:
1 cup (2 sticks) butter
1 ¾ cups sugar
1 cup cottage cheese
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 ½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup cocoa
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped nuts

Frosting:
2 ½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
¼ cup (½ stick) butter
¼ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 350°F. For cookies, cream butter in a large mixing bowl. Gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Add cottage cheese and beat thoroughly. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Blend in vanilla. Sift together flour, cocoa, baking soda, baking powder and salt; gradually add to creamed mixture. Add nuts. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls onto buttered baking sheets; bake 12 to 14 minutes. Remove to wire racks to cool. When completely cool, frost. For frosting, combined all ingredients in a small mixing bowl. Beat until smooth. If frosting thickens, add a small amount of milk.

Terri Myers, Lititz, Pa.

PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

1 cup shortening
1 cup peanut butter
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup brown sugar, packed
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups flour, unsifted
½ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon baking powder

Preheat oven to 357°F. (moderate). Beat shortening and peanut butter together until creamy. Gradually add sugars, beating thoroughly. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Mix remaining ingredients and stir into peanut butter mixture. Shape dough into 1-inch balls. Place about 2 inches apart on an ungreased baking sheet. Flatten each by pressing criss-cross with a fork.

Bake 10 to 15 minutes until lightly browned. Remove from baking sheet while warm.

Tara Easterbrook, Manheim, Pa.

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

SMOKE DETECTORS SAVE LIVES

Smoke detectors are inexpensive, easy to install and could save your family's lives. If you have a wood burning stove in your home then a smoke detector is essential.

Each year some 7,000 people die as a result of home fires in this country. About three quarters of these deaths happen at night and most victims could have been saved if their homes had been equipped with smoke detectors.

Smoke detectors work on two principles-photo electric and ionization. In a photo electric detector, when smoke particles reach a certain concentration, they scatter the light beams which complete the electrical circuit and set off the alarm. In the ionization detector, a radioactive element creates an electric charge in the unit to complete a circuit. Smoke will break the circuit and set off the alarm.

The National Bureau of Standards says that the radiation from the ionization-type smoke detector does not present a radiation hazard.

Some detectors are plugged into an electrical outlet and others operate on batteries. Some may work off an electrical outlet and convert to battery power when the electricity goes off.

If you want a battery operated detector, choose a unit that has readily replaceable batteries available in your area. Some detectors require a special battery that have to be ordered from the manufacturer or specialty store.

When the battery gets low, the detector should give some type of warning. This may be a noise or a visible sign. Some detectors have a light to let you know it is working.

Manufacturers recommend that the detectors be checked regularly to see if it is in good operating condition. Once a month is usually sufficient.

Be sure to read the instructions that come with your smoke detector for instructions on installation and maintenance.

PIZZA FOR BREAKFAST?

With 60% of the mothers of school age children working outside of the home and over half of school age children preparing their own breakfast at least twice a week, quick-to-serve foods are becoming increasingly important.

Scientific studies show that people who start their day with a basic nutritious breakfast perform physically and mentally better than those who start with lighter or heavier meals.

Breakfast should provide about 25% of the day's nutritional needs. Ready-to-eat cereals and hot breakfast cereals play an important role in helping to provide the nutrients needed at breakfast.

Many food and health professionals advocate breaking away from the traditional breakfast menu of bacon and eggs and toast. The monotony of the selection often leads to skipping the meal altogether.

If cereal in its many varied forms doesn't appeal to your family, try serving a sandwich made of leftovers from last night's turkey dinner. Little frozen pizzas with added cheese or sliced pepperoni provide a quick nutritious breakfast. Use your imagination. If the food is nutritious and you would consider it for lunch and dinner why not consider it for breakfast?

Sewing craft contest ends

WASHINGTON — The 1980 National Grange Sewing Machine Craft and Home Decorating Contest has ended and national winners announced. Mrs. Mary Buffington, Director of Women's Activities for the National Grange, said, "This new contest drew hundreds of beautiful and creative entries from men and women of all ages nationwide."

Mrs. Buffington announced the first place national winner in the home decorating division was Norma Jean King of Seymour, Tenn. and first place in the sewing machine craft division, Shirley J. Fomby of Mundelein, Illinois.

The contest was open to both members and non-members of the Grange. It was co-sponsored by the White Sewing Machine Co., Simplicity Patterns, Burlington/Klopman Fabrics and Seralon Thread.

Mrs. King will receive $1,000 and Mrs. Fomby a $1,000 Elna Air Electric sewing machine. In addition one of the winners will be selected Best of Show and receive a trip for two to Switzerland. The Best of Show winner will be announced on Thurs., Nov. 13 in Cedar Rapids, Ia. where the National Grange will be holding its national convention, Nov. 10-16.

Other national winners in the home decorating division were Susan Lindeman, Winlock, Wash., Cheryl Lundgren, Arlington, Va and in the sewing machine craft division, Margarete Leathers, Cranston, R.I. and Doris Stackhouse, Bonners Ferry, Idaho.

Davidsburg 4-H meets

The Davidsburg 4-H club meeting was held October 11 in the form of a Halloween party.

Reports were given during the business meeting by county council member, David Detter, and Teen Leader, Amanda Spahr.

Wayne Eyster made a few comments on the club trip, Nov. 1, to the Ice Follies. Lee Augustine reported on the 4-H cookie sale, and reminded members the money is due before October 29.

Kenneth Kohler will paint the Davidsburg 4-H signs on the edges of Davidsburg.

Dates to remember are: County-wide roller skating party - November 25, 7 to 10 p.m. at Delco Plaza's Roll'R'Way; County Council, November 5; and Club Achievement Night, November 20 at 6:30 p.m. at the 4-H Center. The leaders have charge of the program.

BACON-CHEDDAR CORN PONE

2 cups cornmeal
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 1/2 cups milk
1 tablespoon butter, melted
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1/4 cup crumbled, cooked bacon (about 4 slices)

Mix together cornmeal, salt and baking powder; blend in milk and butter. Stir in Cheddar cheese and bacon. Shape into approximately 2 x 3 inch ovals or rectangles, place on buttered baking sheet and bake in preheated 400 degree oven about 25 minutes, or until golden. Serve immediately with butter and honey. Makes 10-12 servings.

THREE CHEERS BROWNIES

Crust:
1 cup quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter, melted
Brownies:
1/2 cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1 carton plain yogurt (8 oz.)
2 squares (1 oz. each) unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled
Confectioners' sugar

Preheat oven to 350°. For crust, combine dry ingredients. Stir in melted butter until well mixed. Press onto bottom of a 9 inch square baking pan. Bake 10 minutes. Remove from oven; set aside. For brownies, cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs and vanilla; mix well. Combine dry ingredients; stir into creamed mixture. Add yogurt and melted chocolate; mix well. Pour brownie mixture over baked crust. Return to oven and bake until a wooden pick inserted in center of brownies comes out clean, about 45 minutes. cool completely on wire rack. Dust with confectioners' sugar before cutting and serving

MARSHMALLOW TREATS

¼ cup regular margarine or butter
1-16 oz. pkg. regular marshmallows (about 40)
5 cups Rice Krispies cereal

Melt butter in 3 qt. saucepan over low heat, add marshmallows & cook, stirring constantly until marshmallows are melted aand mixture is very syrupy. Remove from heat.

Add Rice Krispie cereal. Stir until well coated, spread warm mixture in buttered 13x9x2 inch pan. Using waxed paper or buttered spatula press firmly into an even layer; cut into layers when cool.

Mrs. Charles Biehl

Now we have the answer to Joan McGuigan's request for baked apple dumplings:

Add to two cups sour milk, one teaspoon baking soda, one teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup butter, or lard or vegetable shortening, and flour enough to make dough a little stiffer than for bisquits.

Peel and core apples, roll out crust, place apples on dough, and fill cavity of each with sugar, and cinnamon if desired. Encase each apple with coating of the crust. Press edges tight together.

Tie a cheese cloth around each apple and put into kettle of boiling water slightly salted. Boil 1/2 an hour, taking care that the water covers the dumplings.

That's all to that recipe, but in this same line, my mother made a dough mixture wrapped in cheese cloth cooked in fruit, berries mostly.

We ate this in bowls with milk. Also in conjunction with your soup recipes, she made a potato soup with an egg flour mixture cooked in it. We called this egg frizzles.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

"You expect me to take these parts like this?"

The parts belonged to a critically ill backhoe, which was holding up all progress on remodeling. Black and greasy, the broken bearings and fuel pump pieces had been tenderly wrapped in an equally greasy piece of — would you believe — ragged old insulated winter long underwear.

Also equally greasy and grimy black was the farmer-turned-temporary- mechanic who had deposited the grubby package of parts on the desk with instructions on what other parts were needed and how to get there.

My trusty Dodge and I turned west into the sunset to seek help and return with the vital supplies and replacements needed to continue our fight with hard-packed earth and giant rocks long buried where a ditch had to be engineered.

Arriving at the Case dealer in the deepening dusk, I gingerly picked up the greasy square of old thermal cotton and its critical cargo of broken metals. A friendly, efficient parts lady peered at the pieces and promptly gathered replacements.

With great rejoicing, I sped back toward home, thankful that for once what we needed so desperately to keep running had been there, and not lost somewhere in Des Moines or wherever by a cranky computer.

Suddenly, I had a thought about another parts need we've been hearing a lot about lately.

Somewhere in Iran, was there a top official gathering Americans to bring to our embassy, wrapped in their "national dirty underwear" of hostage-taking, in exchange for vitally needed parts to keep a war in operation?

Replacing parts for a machine, in exchange for a check that I left with the parts lady, is what I'd call "doing business."

But replacing parts for guns and planes in exchange for innocent peoples lives, is more like what I'd call "blackmail."

However, I'm a reasonable person and after due consideration, I suppose we should be willing to send Iran some weapons back once we get those hostages?

How about a cargo plane full of pea shooters?

A house needs annual checkup

You may have had your annual checkup, but has your house?

Housing specialists say these evaluations are important to help catch little problems before they become big ones.

To help with the inspection, a checklist is available from Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service office in Chester County. It summarizes what you need to evaluate concerning the roof, exterior walls, termites and rot, attic, insulation, interior spaces, cellar, electrical system and the plumbing and heating systems. Inspections can be used to evaluate a new home, if you're planning to move, or to reevaluate your present home.

For example, if your flashing has a green patina, you're in luck. Flashing around chimneys and valleys is the weakest part of any roof. Copper is the best flashing material and will show a green patina with age.

Is exterior paint peeling, curling and/or blistering? This could mean a serious water problem: either a leak or lack of sufficient vapor barrier in walls.

Have you seen any sign of veins of dirt on interior or exterior walls? These are signs of termite mud tunnels. look for them on foundations, under porches, steps and on cellar walls. If in doubt, call in the experts.

Evaluate your present insulation. Most houses built before 1940 had no built-in insulation in the Northeast. Houses with brick or stone walls rarely had added insulation. With cost of fuel soring, estimate if your house needs additional insulation.

To test a house's structure, jump up and down on the floors. If floors vibrate and windows rattle, check further for undersized beams, inadequate bridging, crackes joists and rotted support posts. Often this can be cured fairly simply with a few new support posts.

Examine water pipes and large waste pipes. Look for patches on waste pipes; it's an indicator of advanced age. Replacement may be necessary and it will be expensive. Consult the experts.

Don't postpone a checkup of your home. This warm weather is a good time to do it, and trouble spots will only get worse with inattention, not better.

"the dump"

Geogolical records especially interested them. One indicated that the area might be located on an aquifier, a large underground water flow. Other information suggested that the area's underlying hard rock was of a type that would fracture easily.

One crucial set of pappers that came home in the swelling stack of document copies was the suspension notice to the original Sunny Farms landfill, citing a number of violations. Included were citations of dumping unauthorized illegal hazardous liquid wastes and improper burial procedures of the sanitary wastes.

And they also found indications of what they argue was bureaucratic indifference and shortsightedness in granting a waste disposal permit to an operator with a past history of problems.

"You could find a person here and there in the agencies who tried to be helpful," Stacy Marsh recalled, fingering the stack of copies painstakingly acquired. "But they're few. It's been an education, though. You really learn how to go about obtaining some of this information; there are certain ways to find what you need."

From left, Stacy Marsh, Donna Lecrone and Judy Brenneman pore over files of records gathered from an array of agencies, including the Department of Environmental Resources and the York Historical Society.

"So often these bureaucracies just don't use common sense," was the impression of Donna Lecrone, who admits it's not her first time to lock horns with bureaucracies. During their earlier years of operating an orchard, confrontations with OSHA, the federal Occupational Safety and Health agency, over seasonal fruit harvesting help had given the Lecrone's prior experience in dealing regulators.

While OUCH was fact finding and examining legal angles, MAD was organizing the women of the valley toward some other attack angles.

With several other women of MAD, Stacy and Donna walked the sidewalks in front of the York City Hall. The picketing measure was designed to call attention to the dump plans and generate interest from the residents of York, whose water supply is partially rooted in the abundant springs and streams of Green Valley.

The women also toured the facilities of Liqwacon, the firm that would border the Brenneman dairy farm, and in conjunction with OUCH, held numerous press conferences and public meetings.

It was with a great deal of satisfaction that the small group of farm families, fighting against a possible threat to their livelihood, watched their cause rapidly gain momentum and public support. From surrounding municipalities, elected officials, sportsmen and environmental groups, and school boards, letters poured into DER offices and long lists of petitions grew.

Answering the public demand, DER held a fact-finding meeting on September 28 at a local school auditorium. Two thousand people poured in the Spring Grove School,

MERVIN MILLER — 717-626-5204

Agri-Women host convention

HERSHEY — "Communications is the name of the game, in agriculture, in any business these days. It will become more and more important for farmers in the '80's," affirms Mike Selbert, Second Vice President of American Agri-Women, who moderates the panel "Which Medium for Your Message" at the national convention of AAW in Hershey, PA, November 10-13.

"As farmers and farm women became more and more aware of using the communications tools of this decade, their story will be heard and more fully understood." That's the theory of AAW whose purpose for existence is "to communicate with one another and with other consumers to promote agriculture for the benefit of the American people and the world." AAW functions as a non-partisan, action group and a voice for the busy farmer."

Panelists for the communications event include John Deignan, ABC Radio out of New York City, who hosts a Questions and Answer program for agriculture listeners and non-farmers as well. Farmers, consumers, ask the question, Deignan gets the answers from whatever the source necessary. On network radio, he offers farmers a unique opportunity to speak out and be heard.

Jim Eskin from Agriculture Council of America represents the only agricultural organization whose prime reason for existence is public relations for producers. He will be describing the new "Agriculture: It's Your Heartbeat, America!" program. This grass roots effort of using farmers and their suppliers to hold events, meet the press and the public is making real strides in upgrading the visibility of farmer spokespersons, especially since the advent of the Food Globe, a flashy red, white and blue, bigger than life, disc comparison of American agriculture production with that of six other countries. U.S. is a real "World Food Super Power."

Video taping the video taping of ones critics to show just how the editing might have slanted the story was a technique initiated by Illinois Power and Light when "60 Minutes" did a story on them several months ago. A representative from Philadelphia Power and Light will show portions of that tape and discuss ways in which agriculture can benefit from similar methods.

One-on-one lobbying by constituent with elected official will continue high on the priority list of ways to affect change. Leavitt White of the National Ag Chemical Association will offer creative approaches to this particular medium for the agricultural message.

Effective Speaking Course to Train Agri-Women Delegates

Running concurrently with the convention for five eight-hour sessions will be a "Media Communications Workshop" conducted by Lester Schreiber, Marketing Training Director, Sperry NewHolland. Ten women per day will be able to take this intensive training in communications before video tape-equipment so that by the end of the convention fifty farm women will be better prepared to face the cameras, the microphones, the public in any situation.

On the closing Thursday morning session, affiliate organization presidents will be put on the spot. Laura Heuser will have amassed a slew of criticisms farmers hear often. She will dramatize them to the agri-leader members who must come up with "Positive Comebacks to Criticism." Their responses will be critiqued by Farm Wife News editor Ann Kaiser and Lancaster's WGAL-TV personality Ann Herr in a nitty-gritty review.

Lilly Vincent, Director of Consumer Information, USDA, will give delegates a "Fresh Approach to 'People on the farm,' " an educational materials tool that is available to all.

The Farmer Automatic 4 Deck Cage System

A system well devised and constructed for an uncomplicated and economical operation, modern and advanced, it will help you to gain your well deserved maximum return on your investment.

More layers per square foot of building space, more than any other system on the market today, 10,000 layers per 285 cage row.

Lower maximum cage height, even lower than most 3 deck systems (6'8" max. height, 4'6" max. width).

No special and costly floor or pit construction.

The 4 deck system can be installed in an existing building, without costly conversion or remodeling problems.

Double or even triple your current building capacity.

Automatic manure removal, giving an odor free environment, healthier animals, more pleasant and healthier working conditions.

Higher bird concentration assures a comfortable, energy saving temperature during cold season.

Summer ventilation is easier to accomplish because of the absence of ammonia and other fumes.

Energy Saving Design
Only 3 fractional horsepower motors per row accomplish the automatic feeding, automatic egg conveying and automatic manure removal.

one after another testifying against the dump proposal and calling for the permit revokation. A dozen local fire companies had abetted the effort by announcing the meeting through their communities on public address systems.

MAD and OUCH set the stage for the meeting with a 24-hour prayer vigil, culminating with a speaker from the Love Canal area. The DER fact-finding session began shortly after the Love Canal guest had told her story.

Stacy Marsh drove the speaker to the airport and returned toward Spring Grove for the evening meeting. Approaching the small rural town, she found herself caught in a jam of traffic headed toward the school.

"I just sat there in the car and cried when I saw all those people," she smiles. "This was what we know we had to do - get out the people - and they had come."

Since that public hearing, no DER decision on Stabatrol's right to the waste disposal permit has yet been announced. MAD and OUCH have continued their efforts to oppose the plans, and recently obtained lists of the tentative customers and quantities of waste expected in the vaulting sites.

While the companies planning to vault the wastes insist that local industry needs the disposal system in order to keep the York manufacturing economy strong, the list of customers includes large quantities of waste scheduled to be hauled in from distant points in New York and New Jersey.

The Lecrones, the Marshs and the Brennemans admit that the battle is far from over.

And one of the foremost concerns for these farm mothers, they say, is not for themselves, but for their children. For if the stress has been difficult for the adults, who understand politics and bureaucrats, it's been even worse for the children. For many of them, normal family life has been turned upside down by the time consumed in the anti-dump activities.

"The kids play 'the dump' complete with someone sneaking into the dump while the others spy on them, sort of a version of 'cowboys and Indians," Stacy Marsh says. "Our youngest, who's three, even pleaded with me to get off the phone for just a while."

The Lecrone family has been similarly affected, Donna agrees. She relates that her youngsters go running to the window every time they hear a truck changing gears. And, they don't come bounding in from school, eager to share the day's news, like they once did.

"It's gotten to the point where we can't visualize what it was like before 'the dump'," frowns Donna. "The kids have even wondered why we can't just sell out and move. I really think they're questioning what we've always taught them about respecting authority, because it seems like the authorities are harassing us now. What are they supposed to believe in?"

Judy Brenneman believes that her youngsters understand even better than she does what the long-range implications of the toxic chemical problem means for the future, through their studies at school.

"They just don't like it. Our son would like to someday take over the farm; he already does most of the dairy herd care. What will he have left if someone else's wastes ruin the water or the land," she ponders, motherly concern showing in her eyes and raising a touch of anger in her voice.

It's doubtful that any of the farm families of these peaceful valleys will ever look at things quite the same as they did in "pre-dump" days. Their brush with bureaucratic and regulatory red tape has left them highly sensitive to controversial political issues.

"I'll never be lax in participating in my local government," Stacy Marsh insists. "I've met an awful lot of people through this, and I feel like I'm getting to know state government real well."

But while this political awareness is now part of life for women like Judy Brenneman, Stacy Marsh and Donna Lecrone, at the same time, it's robbed them of a casualness and positive feeling about the future security of their right to farm. Sociologists label this mushrooming problem of outside pressures on the farm community as "farm stress".

Stacy Marsh recalled that this emotional wearing surfaced briefly during the day when MAD picketed City Hall. She and Donna, watching women casually strolling the streets of York, looked at each other and asked: "Do you think we'll ever be able to just simply go shopping again?"

Progress sometimes extracts a high price for its benefits. Farmers of North Codorus wonder whether it's worth the cost.

Junior Cooking Edition

Juniors, we have an extra-special treat for you this week; now you can make your own playdough! No longer do you have to beg mom to buy you some at the store because this playdough is fun and simple to make.

You may want to remind mom that it will wash out of carpets and clothes, or any where else you may want to play with it. But remember, though it may be safe, it's to play with, not eat!

Playdough

1½ cups water
1/2 cup salt
Boil the water and salt and then remove from heat. Let cool.
Add:
1 tablespoon shortening
2 tablespoons alum
2 cups flour
food coloring
Knead like dough and it's ready for play.

Before we try our recipes, let's see what you spend your time doing.

Billy Shultz, age 7, wrote in and said that he and his classmates made life-sized self portraits of themselves.

This is an interesting way to decorate your bedroom wall, juniors. Try it! Lie down on a piece of heavy brown wrapping paper while your mom traces an outline of your body. Cut them out, and color them in. See how much like yourself you can make it.

Remember this week is Halloween. The pumpkins should be carved, the costumes made, and the masks ready to go. So, have fun trick-or-treating and Happy Halloween!

Try these great pumpkin recipes:

PUMPKIN COOKIES

1 cup butter or shortening
1 cup sugar
1 cup pumpkin
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup chopped dates or raisins
1/2 cups chopped nuts

Work butter until creamy. Gradually work in sugar until mixture is smooth. Add pumpkin, egg, and vanilla. Beat batter well. Sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda, cinnamon, and salt. Blend it into the creamy mixture. Stir in raisins or dates and nuts. Mix well.

Drop by spoonfuls unto greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350° from 10 to 15 minutes.

Frosting:

In a saucepan put 1/2 cup brown sugar, 1/4 cup milk, and 3 tablespoons butter. Cook mixture for 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let cool. Stir in 3/4 teaspoon vanilla and 1 cup 10x sugar.

Co. homemakers prepare for Christmas

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

Monday and Tuesday, October 20 and 21 proved to be quite a delightful as well as a productive day for the homemakers of Lancaster County.

At a two day Christmas program (the same program both days) approximately 850 women were presented with craft and cooking ideas for the coming holidays.

Highlights of the program were instruction in baking a ginger bread home by Patty Hudson, and a demonstration on how to make Christmas decorations, gifts, and ornaments by Sherry Kalbach.

This portion of the program, "Christmas on a Shoestring" was to present gifts which wouldn't break the bank.

Sherry described her crafts as "easy, quick and inexpensive."

A former elementary school librarian, Sherry says she spends her time doing these crafts and presenting programs for other women to learn as well. She laughingly admits she owns 700 Christmas decorations for her tree.

Another topic the homemakers seemed to enjoy was "Around the World for the Holidays," a food demonstration presenting ideas for holiday entertaining.

This treat was presented by Susan L. Doyle, Lancaster, a free lance home economist.

In her spare time Susan teaches sewing and cooking classes as well as presenting programs for interested groups.

The dishes Mrs. Doyle created for demonstration were then awarded as door prizes to the homemakers.

Doris Thomas, Lancaster Extension Home Economist and Michele Rodgers, also Extension Home Economist, each gave a talk on Christmas crafts.

Mrs. Thomas, who has been doing the program for 18 years says she is more than pleased with the turnout. She did, in fact, turn away at least 100 women each day.

Mrs. Rodgers showed crafts to be made for and by children for Christmas.

Lancaster Farm Women Societies set up displays at the Christmas program. Some societies also sold home-made baked goods.

This ginger bread home was only one of the attractions at the two-day affair. Patty Hudson gave a demonstration on making these remarkable ginger homes.

some advice for making children's toys. Three things to remember are:1. Always consider toy safety before you start any project 2. Pick toys to the age level of the child; if it's too easy he will feel frustrated and if it's too hard he will feel defeated 3. Have a good toy diet which allows a child to be creative in a variety of ways.

Mrs. Rodgers finished her talk by reminding the homemakers that Christmas is for and about kids. It did, after all, originate from a child, so let kids help pick a tree even though it's cold outside. Also let them help make Santa cookies, because "Christmas is for children too."

Sherry Kalbach presented easy, quick and inexpensive crafts which won't break the bank at the Homemaker's Christmas program.

Michele Rodgers, Extension Home Economist, holds "Eddie the Snake," just one of the many crafts for children to make. To her right is a bean bag target and to her left, foam stuffed tools, both of which children will love to create.

Dairy Mineral Program

While most minerals are only needed in a small level in a dairy feed, they are nevertheless very important in maintaining good milk production and optimal herd health.

Particular attention needs to be paid to the mineral nutrition of dairy cows because the forages that they consume vary widely in mineral content.

For this reason, the Pennfield Mineral Program is composed of three different formulas which are designed to complement the forage feeding programs on the farm. These minerals can be fed free choice, used in complete rations or top dressed on the bunk.

Fat Booster Pack is helpful in milk fat depression problems commonly found in the summer and also for cows on low fiber roughages.

Farm Women Societies

Berks Co. Convention

The 29th Annual Farm Women Convention of Berks County was held October 4 at the Berks Ag. Center.

Nominations were held for offices resulting in Verna Taylor for president, Pat Haas for vice president and Terry Hetrick for secretary.

Seventeen guests from different counties were present; including Helen Hess, state president who encouraged nominations for 2 state directors and 1 state secretary.

A short talk by Faye Strickler, home economist, encouraged the ladies to enter the Reading Fair.

Dairy princess Karen Sattazahn gave a talk on cheese.

A catered lunch and a silent auction were highlights of the day.

Award presentation resulted in Society 1 for attendance, and Society 6 came in first for Scrapbook.

Officers were installed by Helen Hess and everyone enjoyed a short program by the "Sweet Adelines."

Cumberland Co. Convention

Cumberland County Convention will be held Saturday, Novemer 8 at 10 a.m. at the Embers Restaurant.

The speaker for the day will be William Groff, pastor of the First Church of God in Mechanicsburg.

A talk about quilt making will be given by Mrs. Sue Bousliman.

Teresa Murren (at right), McSherrystown, receives the clover plaque for 35 years service as a 4-H leader from Adams County 4-H Board President Freda Meyerhoffer.

Leaders honored

LITTLESTOWN — National 4-H Week in Adams County was highlighted by the Annual 4-H Leaders Banquet.

This year special recognition was given to Teresa Murren from McSherrystown for 35 years of 4-H leadership and support.

Miss Murren was presented with a walnut plaque by Jerry Tyson, 4-H Agent. The other inspired leaders and guests honored her with a standing ovation and cheers.

Leaders honored for 20 years of service were Ruth Davies and Helen Rex; 15 years, Dorothy Byers, Evelyn Waybright; and Ronald Harrison; 10 years, Joanne Clowney, Margaret Dague, Donna Finafrock, Isabelle Hinkle, Bonnie Kuntz, Mrs. Ralph Nicholson, and Glenda Shetter.

J.E. Baker Company represented by Leon Hull received the "Partners in 4-H" award. The J.E. Baker Company has been a loyal supporter of the 4-H program for more than a decade.

Joanne Clowney, Luther Smith, Alice Hoffman, and Kenneth Reinhart were elected as directors to serve on the Adams County 4-H Board.

Captain Jack Fellowes, USN, topped off the evening by sharing his experiences as a POW during the Vietnam War. Captain Fellowes was the second longest held prisoner of the conflict.

Leon Hull receives the Partners in 4-H plaque on behalf of the J.E. Baker Company from Adams County 4-H Board President Freda Meyerhoffer. J.E Baker Company was honored for its support of the 4-H program throughout the years.

Picking a peck of hot peppers

ELVERSON — A hot new idea in cash crops has rooted in Lancaster County - hot peppers.

Approximately twenty-seven acres of the fiery vegetable have been planted in Eastern Lancaster County as part of a pilot project spearheaded by George Perry of Farmers-Consumers Service Associates, and advised by Robert Anderson and Don Robinson, adult farmer advisors in the Eastern Lancaster County School District.

Robinson explained the advent of the crop in the County, "During this past year, George was one of the speakers in our adult farmer meetings. (He heads the non-profit FCSA agency aimed at establishing direct markets for small farmers).

"Shortly after he spoke at our meeting, he received word that Ben Lipitz was looking for a new growing area for hot peppers. There were some problems with the New Jersey crop, and he was interested in helping get farmers in other areas started growing the cash crop.

"George called Lipitz, along about May 1, and things just sort of went from there. By May 30, we had 23 farmers planting anywhere from ½-2 acres of the peppers, a total of 27 acres."

Why would anyone choose Lancaster County to grow hot peppers? Anderson said that the climate is good for the crop and large families provide the labor needed to grow the crop economically.

Perry said that the reason his agency chose to help the farmers grow and market hot peppers than some of the other already existing crops was the verbally guaranteed market for the end product. "Too often farmers grow crops with no clear idea of where they will market that

The shiny peppers are born on an 18-24 inch erect plant. Planted with tobacco transplanters at the rate of 6000-7000 plants per acre, initial studies suggested the return per acre could be approximately that of tobacco, with less work.

crop. No other businessman would supply a service or a product without first assuring himself that a market exists. With the peppers, we had the market nearly given to us."

Plants for the crop arrived May 30 from Georgia, according to Robinson, and the cost of the plants will be deducted from the checks when the crop is marketed.

The crop was planted with tobacco transplanters at approximately 6000 plants per acre, and in all cases except one, was mechanically weeded. One farmer chose to spray his crop. The only real guides the farmers had to work with on the new crop were a bulletin on peppers geared more toward sweet peppers from Penn State and the advice of Lipitz who inspected the crop's progress occasionally.

Most growers sprayed for aphids and corn borer. While the aphids were really no problem, the peppers which are bottled whole, are unappetizing to the consumer if a corn borer is found inside them, so spraying for the borers is more a matter of prevention.

Anderson said that the weather has been detrimental to this first year crop. While the first contacts were only made in early May, the crop should have been in the ground by that time. That coupled with the drought in the area has caused the loss of 2-3 pickings. Anderson said that blossom drop alone caused the loss of two pickings.

The advantage of peppers over some cash crops is that there is only about a two week delay between picking and receipt of the check for the produce. No cash outlay other than preparation of the crop was necessary for the growers. And the trucking is being paid by the buyer. Labor is usually provided by the family, and is considerably less than for tomatoes or cantaloupes.

Tobacco diseases have lowered yields in recent years, Robinson said, and the return per acre for the peppers could be estimated to be about that of tobacco $1100-$1200 per acre.

Each grower paid a one time marketing fee for membership in FCSA and will have a 5 percent commission deducted from his checks.

Perry said that the buyer and the grower consider this is a pilot project. Obviously, he said the growers will need to make a profit. And the buyer will be checking the quality of the crop throughout this season's harvest. A thick walled pepper with five percent red peppers is what the growers are striving for. And while the season has not produced the quantity of peppers it should, the drought has caused the peppers to have a very thick wall. But 21 out of the 23 farmers had never grown peppers before, and the possibilities for future years rests on their shoulders.

If all goes well, the possibility exists for 75-100 acres of the peppers in the County next year.

Perry said that some of the farmers are considering irrigation next year. While most years it would not be necessary, he said it would have made a real difference in this year's crop.

Harvey Sauder grew about one and a quarter acres this year. He sprayed his crop with Devrinol (WP) and a Furidan preplant incorporated spray. While the crop required some hand weeding, he said his crop stayed pretty clean.

Sauder said he expected he'd harvest a little more than half what the original estimates were. He said that his children age 5 and up all helped pick the peppers, and that it was a crop they could pick well. In his first harvest, he picked 65 5/8 baskets from his acreage. He compared the labor of peppers in three acres to that in one acre of pickles.

While Sauder is disappointed in the crop this year, he said he was not expecting to give up on the crop and hoped to have over three acres planted next year.

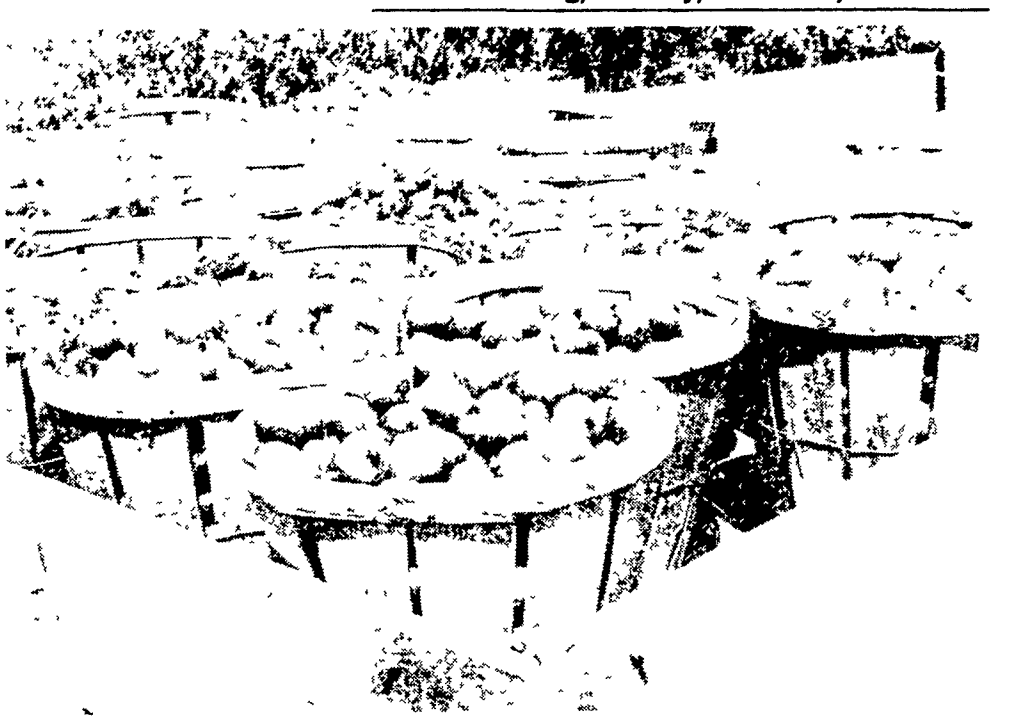
Final harvesting for the peppers took place Monday and Tuesday, October 20 and 21.

Until this point, the farmers were averaging $284 to the acre for earlier pickings, with one farmer receiving as much as $757 for three quarters of an acre to one acre, and another as low as $75.

Anderson blames the low figures not only on the drought, but also on a hail storm which hit shortly after the crops were planted. "The rain was very strange this year. One guy could get as much as 3/4 inch of rain while his neighbor only 1 mile away would get hardly any. This could be a reason for the great difference in returns.

The four early pickings averaged about 8300 pounds per acre. This came out to 66,486 pounds, and 2,375 bushels.

Latest accounts on the peppers for Monday and Tuesday reached 10,270 pounds, but it will be a while before final statistics can be reached according to Perry.



The peppers waiting in this wagon were picked up by a tractor trailer and hauled to a Philadelphia market. They will be bottled whole. The peppers are picked with stems on, and should run approximately 5 percent red peppers. Ideal picking stage is about the diameter of a quarter.

Hess reveals surprising statistics on teenagers

BY SALLY BAIR

HERSHEY — Dr. Catherine Hess did not pull any punches when she talked about the "epidemics" among young people at the recent Family Focus on the 80's seminar held at Hershey under the sponsorship of Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service.

Her statistics were both chilling and eye-opening and she made it clear that she feels the loss of sanctions in today's society is at the root of many of the problems facing teenagers and pre-teenagers as they search for an identity and a place to be "number one".

She stated, "Our culture is changing. Our culture no longer maintains sanctions. As a group we have gotten away from insisting that something be done."

Speaking from a background of experience in dealing with youth with alcohol, drug and other problems, Hess made it clear that facing these "epidemics" of pregnancy, drugs, divorce and others is the responsibility of parents who must guide and prepare their children adequately.

Her compassion showed when she said, "When a human being is diminished, everybody loses. You must encourage and cooperative, but do not shove."

The bad news she brought about the epidemics points out the pressures bearing on young people in this society. Hess pointed out that teenage pregnancy has increased so that in the 1980's one in ten high school girls will become pregnant. According to Hess, teenage births have more than doubled since 1960. In 1970, she said that eighty percent of these babies were put up for adoption while in 1980, only 10 percent will be. She said, "What we have is babies having babies."

She cited many reasons for the increase in unwanted pregnances, saying, "It's a quick way to become grown-up." There is also peer pressure, the tremendous sexual activity viewed on television and poor education. She added, "Sex education should be taught, whether in the home, the school or the church."

A new problem, according to Hess, is homosexuality, adding that it can easily occur when "a child cannot find a number one position in the home. Children need good friends to confide in, to mature and to grow."

Alcohol and drugs are another problem Hess reported on. She said that 85 percent of the juniors and seniors in high school are drinking once a week. "I am concerned about what this generation will be like in the next 10 years in positions of responsibility."

She told the homemakers that children must develop good self-images without getting involved in drugs.

Another problem is runaway teenagers, which, according to Hess, has reached 2000 per day. "They escape because they are not wanted," Hess stated.

Another "epidemic" Hess told about is divorce. "It is so easy to get a divorce that people don't work through their problems anymore. When you're having dates everyone is on their good behavior and then they don't know how to handle it when things are not going well."

Hess noted that 45 percent of the children born today will end up with one-parent families. She said divorces leave children with the anxiety of abandonment, with anger and guilt and they feel powerless to stop it.

Working mothers have changed the whole concept of living today, Hess said. She noted that she is not against working mothers but is against their not planning and preparing for it properly. "Someone must be there when a child comes home from school. They must have that contact of being wanted," she stated.

She also mentioned briefly the "epidemics" of religious cults and vandalism and brutality.

With the overwhelming evidence of problems, Hess nevertheless gave her audience hope that they can cope and help their children withstand the pressures they face. She stated, "We must have the children prepared. They must have self-confidence, esteem and maturity. We have to provide opportunities for self-esteem to be expressed." School activities, are one way for this, Hess said.

"We have to remove the fear of failure from their background. Each person is unique so don't compared one child to another. Human beings are the most important things in the world. They are more important than textbooks and grades, and feelings are more important than textbooks." She urged the homemakers to praise the positive and not dwell on the negative.

She addressed a common problem of parents by saying, "Be consistent. Say something once and mean it. If you can't follow through with a threat don't give it."

Urging parents to be "responsible" parents, not "good" parents, Hess said, "You must give the kid an opportunity to learn. They learn by experience. Living is learning. People learn their way through life by coping. Be tolerant of what happens to children."

She advised, "Save the 'no's' for the really big things kids get involved in. Never do for a child what he can do for himself if you want him to have physical and emotional maturity to help him cope. It takes tremendous patience."

Hess told the homemakers to help their children learn to make decisions and choices as a step in reducing anxieties which she says are increasing.

"Help give children guidance. We have a strong future foundation if we begin to knuckle down. You have the potential in your hands. Allow the child to mature and to have real experiences," she concluded.

Crowning of Apple Queen USA highlights apple harvest festival

BY MARY MYERS
Staff Correspondent

CARROLL VALLEY — Katherine Solenberger from Virginia was crowned Miss Apple Queen U.S.A. 1980 on Friday evening at the Carroll Valley Golf Club near Fairfield.

The coronation was the highlight of the Adams County Apple Harvest Festival.

Miss Solenberger is the daughter of C. Robert and Bessie Solenberger, fruit growers from the Winchester area. She is a piano student in the creative arts program at Shenandoah College and Conservatory.

The new queen was also named Miss Congeniality. This award was voted her by the other 10 contestants.

Miss Joni Lynn Hunt, apple queen from Michigan and a cosmetologist, was chosen first runner-up. Second runner-up was Keela Keets Lyda, a registered nurse, the North Carolina apple queen.

This year's festival attracted a record-breaking crowd which annually draws 50,000 persons.

Special features were the strolling entertainers, colorful tours of the orchards, handcrafters and artists. Many appealing apple delights were prepared while onlookers watched and enjoyed the festivities.

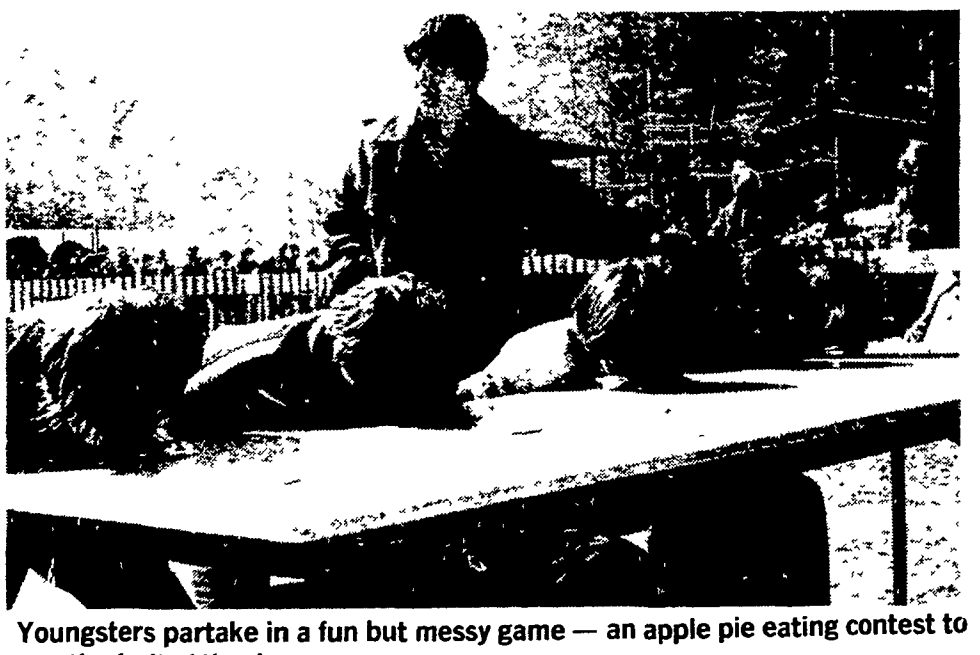
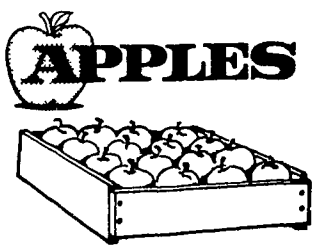
The blacksmith today might not be found with a shop in a livery stable but the hammer, anvil, and red hot iron are still familiar sights.

Cider press was in operation all day long. Onlookers purchased the sweet refreshment.



Youngsters partake in a fun but messy game — an apple pie eating contest to honor the fruit of the day.



Representing Pennsylvania in the Apple Queen Contest was Kris Shutt from Orrtanna, Adams County, the hometown favorite.

Berks tour covers Christmas trees, soil

BY LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

LEESPORT — Christmas tree production, forest fire control, conservation of farmland soil and a touch of Berks County's history were all highlights of the annual conservation tour sponsored by the Berks County ASCS and SCS last Thursday.

Tom Delong showed guests his nursery plot where he raises his own seedlings for transplanting into fields.

Explaining the tasks and time involved in growing Christmas trees was Tom Delong, R6 Sinking Spring, owner and operator of Delong's Christmas Tree Farm.

This operation was started in 1941 by Delong's father, then employed as a State Forester. It was an old 50 acre farm grown up in brush that was cleared away by the new owners.

Presently the Delongs have 38 acres planted in Christmas trees, 85 percent of which are Douglas Fir. Other varieties grown for harvest are Blue Spruce, White Pine and some Scotch Pine.

Delong noted however that he isn't planting anymore Scotch Pine because of the insect problems he has experienced with their production. He does however experiment with many other varieties such as the Frazer Fir.

Most of the tree planting done on this operation is by hand, using specialized spade or diggers, a few being hand made. The seedlings are planted next to a stump of a previously harvested tree. Tree spacing is usually about five feet from tree to tree in five foot rows.

The trees are trimmed with hedge shears and pruners every summer with the help of three young men. The fields are kept mowed between the trees for fire prevention, invasion of hardwood species and mice control, as well as for the aethetic beauty of well groomed fields.

"Thousands of trees can be lost to mice," Delong explained, "if the habitat is right for them." Delong also commented that the average age of the trees to be harvested this year is 15 years. "For the first 15 years (of Christmas Tree production) you are just starting," he also added with a smile.

When selected for harvest the trees are marked with different colored tags coded for size and variety. They are then cut down and baled by a specialized machine that wraps the boughs of the tree up closer to the truck, making handling and shipping easier.

Approximately 90 percent of the trees harvested by Delong are sold wholesale and shipped to large metropolitan areas such as Connecticut, New York and Philadelphia. The remaining 10 percent are sold retail by Delong at the farm.

seedlings, rarely buying them from larger nurseries. Seeds are started in indoor plots prepared with sawdust and shaded to about 50 percent with screens.

They are kept moist by watering every three or four days and transplanted when two years old and one and a half inches apart in eight inch rows for better root formation.

After they are three years old the trees are again transplanted, this time into the fields where they will grow until ready for harvest.

Delong stressed the importance of early spring transplanting, noting the added benefit the trees received from the early spring rains. He also urged his guests to plant trees on their open land, even if it may not pay in their own generation. "It's worth if for your grandchildren." he remarked.

Delong recommended that trees planted for forest plots be kept ten to twelve feet apart, at least. The wider spacing is better for growth, and wildlife, and will last for longer periods of time.

The tour host also showed his guests a beautiful pond and forest planting established on the farm by himself and father. The low lying area had previously been a swamp until tiled through the aide of the Berks County Soil Conservation Service which also designed the pond.

Other conservation practices such as cropland terraces and conservation strips were also seen and explained. These practices were shown to the tour participants on the farm of Sam Schlouch, Birdsboro.

Schlouch operates a diversified farming operation with the help of a son and several other part time employees and family members. The Schlouch's farm approximately 300 acres, raise about 100 steers and 200 hogs per year.

Crops include about 80 acres of corn, 50 acres of wheat, 20 acres each of barley and oats and smaller acreages of sweet corn, potatoes, tobacco, buckwheat, soybeans and a large variety of vegetables, The vegetables, buckwheat and soybeans are double cropped after barley is harvested.

All farmland is laid out in narrow conservation strips because of the very susceptible nature of the soil to erosion, especially washing. Pasture land is laid out in terraces, 100 feet apart This land can be tilled but Schlouch feels it serves his purpose well as permanent pasture.

John Bearer, Berks County Service Forester hosted the tour group at French Creek State Park, discussing the facilities offered to vacationers, and explaining the fire prevention facilities located there. Guests from the tour had the opportunity to climb the Hopewell Fire Tower erected in 1935 with an elevation of 980 feet.

The tower is manned during fire hazard periods ranging from February to May and October to the first winter snow. The tower wasn't operated during this dry summer, however, concern was raising about the necessity of it.

Bearer also explained that the Bureau of Forestry has a program for private tree plantings. The Bureau will supply certain evergreens for a minimal cost of $20 per thousand and certain hardwoods for $35 per thousand

Last stop of the conservation tour was the historic site of Joanna Furnace, near Morgantown. Joanna Furnace was an iron mill where iron ore was melted down into slag and iron for 105 years beginning in 1792.

The furnace site is presently being restored by the Hay Creek Restoration Association. The history of the furnace and basic operation was explained by members of the restoration association.

This particular furnace used charcoal to melt the iron ore during the entire period of it's operation using up 4000 to 6000 acres of forest the operators had surrounding the furnace.

Also in operation during the tour was a steam powered lumber mill where several men were sawing lumber from large trees, and preparation for the Apple Festival scheduled for the weekend.

Other sponsors of the tour were the Berks County Conservation District, Berks County Extension Service and Farmers Home Administration.

Sam Schlouch, center, Alleganyville, showed tour guests his diversified farming operation.

Lehigh Farmers Union to meet

FOGELSVILLE — A mandatory statewide milk referendum as well as problems with strains of tuberculosis that affect the hog industry are on the producers. So the Lehigh County farmers and swine producedrs. So the Lehigh County Farmers Union will hold an open forum for its members and the general public.

The Farmers Union policy meeting is slated for October 30, at 7:30 p.m. at the Farm Credit Office in Fogelsville.

In announcing the meeting, Lehigh County Farmers Union President Lester Loch said of the referendum, "All indications lead us to believe the proposed milk referendum will not coincide with Farmers Union policy. Our meeting will provide an opportunity for dairymen of Lehigh County to discuss how they feel about a mandatory dairy advertising program."

The Pennsylvania Farmers Union is participating on the PDA committee drafting the referendum, and wants input from farmers.

Loch said the local Farmers Union wants to keep its members and the general public informed about the possible referendum.

Many farmers have suffered serious financial losses when the swine they produce test positive for Avian tuberculosis, a strain of the disease which is not communicable to humans. Some hogs, after being shipped from the farm to larger feeding facilities, came in contact with the disease. And since there is no mandatory identification program, feeding facilities often do not know the source farm.

Loch said he hopes the organization will present proposed solutions to the problem, so policy can be drafted and sent to state convention.

All members of the Farmers Union and the public are invited to attend the meeting.

However, only current Lehigh County Farmers Union members will be eligible to vote on county policy recommendations.

Scientist develops method to detect adulterated apple juice

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A U.S. Department of Agriculture researcher presented findings on a new method for detecting adulterated apple juice during the annual meeting of the Association of Official Analytical Chemists held here Thursday.

Landis W. Doner, a research chemist with the USDA's Science and Education Administration at the Eastern Regional Research Center in Philadelphia, together with John G. Phillips, a consulting statistician with SEA's Northeastern Region, developed the method to detect apple juice adulterated by high-fructose corn syrup but labelled as containing no added sugar.

Their method, called stable carbon isotope ratio analysis, takes advantage of the fact that most fruits including apples produce sugars differently than do corn, sugar cane, sorghum and other sources of inexpensive sweeteners.

HFCS cannot be detected through conventional sugar analysis since both its sugar composition and sweetness are identical to the sugar of pure apple juice. While the practice of adulterating apple juice with corn syrup presents no health hazard, "these practices do provide a threat to the integrity of apple juice markets and represent a fraud to the consumer," said Doner.

It is important for consumers to know that when they go into a store they get what is described on the label; it's important to maintain that confidence," he said.

In the test for adulteration, the scientists analyze carbon isotope ratios of sample apple juice. Since corn sugars are naturally more enriched with carbon-13 isotopes than fruit sugars, by measuring the ratio of carbon-13 to carbon-12 in apple juice with an instrument called a mass spectrometer, added sweeteners can be readily distinguished from the fruit sugars.

By comparing the mixture's isotope ratio to that of pure apple juice, which has a naturally lower carbon-13 to carbon-12 ratio, researchers can estimate the level to which the apple juice has been adulterated.

To make certain that all apples maintain low carbon-13 to carbon-12 ratios, USDA researchers tested forty-one pure apple juice samples, representing eighteen apple varieties.

Emphasizing that isotope ratios do not significantly vary regionally among apples, Doner said, "No relationship was found between carbon-13 to carbon-12 ratio and the variety or geographical origin of the apples."

Following the finding that apples uniformly have lower carbon-13 to carbon-12 ratios than HFCS, a collaborative study with the University of Rhode Island, the University of Quebec at Montreal, Coastal Science Laboratories, Inc., Kreuger Enterprises, Inc., Brigham Young University, and the Technical University of Munich demonstrated that the addition of corn sweeteners to apple juice can be "unequivocally" detected by the stable carbon isotope ratio analysis method.

Without previously knowing the nature of five test samples, the laboratories of each of the six instructions correctly identified one pure apple juice sample and four apple juice-HFCS mixtures containing twenty-five to seventy-five percent apple juice. The four apple juice-HFCS mixtures submitted to the collaborators had been deliberately adulterated with HFCS.

"Adulteration of apple juice has been occurring on a large scale and may pose a significant economic threat to the apple industry," said Doner.

Already, because fewer apples are needed to produce adulterated apple products, apple growers have experienced decreased apple sales. Pure apple juice producers, unable to compete with the frequently lower prices of adulterated apple juice, have also lost income due to decreased sales.

Doner said an independent survey of more than two hundred samples of apple juice and apple juice concentrates showed that over a third were adulterated.

Apple juice ranks as the nation's number one selling canned and bottle fruit juice, with a 1978 sales figure of $224 million. However, economic and seasonal disparities have led some apple juice manufacturers to adulterate their products.

"Adulteration would be most likely to occur in spring and summer to stretch the supply of apples, which ripen in the fall. By adulterating apple juice at the 50 percent level, a manufacturer can reduce his costs by 40 percent," said Doner.

Federal regulation prohibits the labelling and selling of adulterated products as pure products. But according to Doner, until the isotope ratio analysis method is sanctioned as an official method for detecting adulterated apple juice, regulatory agencies will have no practical method to detect fraudulently labelled apple juice.

Originally devised to detect adulterated honey, the stable carbon isotope ratio analysis method is awaiting official approval by the Association of Official Analytical Chemists, an association which evaluates standardized analytical methods. Official approval is expected in December.

Research to adapt the isotope ration analysis method for detection of adulterated orange juice is under way.

Berks extension meeting covers new center, 4-H

BY LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

KUTZTOWN — The Berks County Cooperative Extension Service held their 66th annual meeting at the Kutztown Grange Hall.

Among the activities conducted during the evening program was the introduction of newly elected Directors to the Board, and the presentation of certificates of appreciation to outgoing members.

Guest speaker of the evening was Maurice Kramer, State 4-H Program Director. Larry Stratton, a distinguished member of the Kutztown 4-H club and senior at Kutztown High School was master of ceremonies, introducing three other 4-H members who entertained the large audience, and also the guest speaker.

Ernest Heckman, president of the extension association, conducted the business meeting and Fay Strickler, extension home economist, introduced the extension staff. Wayne Lesher and Rev. Roderick Sutliff, members of the 4-H Development Council discussed the present status of the 4-H Community Center.

Presently there are two horse rings, one equipped with lights, a two story secretaries booth, pond and wildlife area established on the 10.2 acre sight located behind the Berks County Agricultural Center, Leesport Rd.

Lesher announced the scheduled fund raising events needed to raise money for the planned livestock and community buildings which will hopefully be nearly complete by the next annual meeting to be held in the Autumn of 1981.

Among the fund raising events already planned are a Dairy Calf Sale to be held at the Fairgrounds Square Mall on November 22; a Hoedown, November 29, and a Beef Feeder Calf Sale scheduled for December 5.

Sutliff noted the committee has already selected an architech who is presently drawing up final plans for the buildings.

Heckman presented recently retired County Agent James Haldeman with a life membership from the National Association of County Agents and a check for the leftover funds of the retirement luncheon held in his honor during August.

Guest of honor, Kramer discussed "4-H in the 80's." The State program director praised Pennsylvania for the terrific facilities, program and staff offered to 4-H youth within the State. He also stated that the State 4-H program's goal for excellence in serving all youth.

"We can't stand still with a good program, we have got to have a better program every year," he urged.

Kramer suggested 4-H programs should focus on youth development and that 4-H is even more important today then ever before.

"We must continually evaluate what we are doing and always be geared to meet the needs of kids," he said.

A program that was very good last year may not be that good another year, he explained. Kids are all different, unique, and have different needs.

"4-H has a responsibility to all youth," he again emphasized, mentioning that 4-H has been accused of being "the best kept secret in town."

The State Program Director challenged the county 4-H leaders and staff to increase the 4-H youth retention rate and time involvement. Especially young men. Presently 4-H members have a two to one ratio of girls to boys, and teenage involvement is very low. The retention rate will increase when members are proud to be in 4-H, Kramer predicted.

There should be more teen leaders then adult leaders but isn't, the speaker also remarked. He added he would like to see more 4-H alumni come back to work with the 4-H programs. Volunteer leaders are the key 4-H leaders, Kramer continued. 4-H should be a local responsibility and supported by the community, not by Federal agencies, he added.

"Working with your county youth is the greatest resource we have," he commented. "Put time and effort and let's not depend on others. Let's do it ourselves," he encouraged.

The speaker also commented on the tremendous growth 4-H programs have experienced in the past twenty years, noting that there are presently over five million youth and a half million leaders involved in 4-H today.

The 4-H staff should be professional, trained, motivated, interested, and dedicated to serving youth, he also commented, and adding that the staff must also continue to grow and develop with 4-H.

The entertainment during the evening program included a song sung by Cristen Smith of the Fleetwood 4-H Community Club entitled "Tomorrow."

A Gong Show rendition of "Short People" by Melanie Caskie of Rehrersburg 4-H Club and a presentation entitled "What 4-H Has meant to me", by Danielle Yoder, a member of the Tilden 4-H Community Club and this year's winner of the Pennsylvania State Citizens Award.

Newly elected board members are Richard Hoffman, Gail Malsbury, Lee Spenser, and Audrey Schoenly. Retiring from the board were: Marilyn Althouse, C. Wayne Beekman, Morris E. Brown, Jr., and Mary Kirkhoff.

Other board members are: Roy Christman, Earl Hafer, Ernest Heckman, Wilmer Kraybill, Rita Lesher, Wayne Lesher, Donald Meyers, Grace Moore, George Moyer, Helen Readinger, Arlene Rebman, Kenneth Schlegel, Harold Schuler, Millie Shirey, Dorothy Strickler, and Nancy Strunk. 4-H representatives Darlene Dietrich and Glenn Yanos also retired and will be replaced at a later date.

Ex-Officio members are: Ernest Miller, Master of Pomona Grange, replacing retired grange Master Feryl Treichler; Jack Kooker, Jr., President of Berks County Farmers Association; and Helen Mengel, Past President Berks County Federation of Women's Club.

Larry Shrawder, master of ceremonies; Maurice Kramer, State 4-H program director; and Ernest Heckman, president of the extension association gather at the podium.

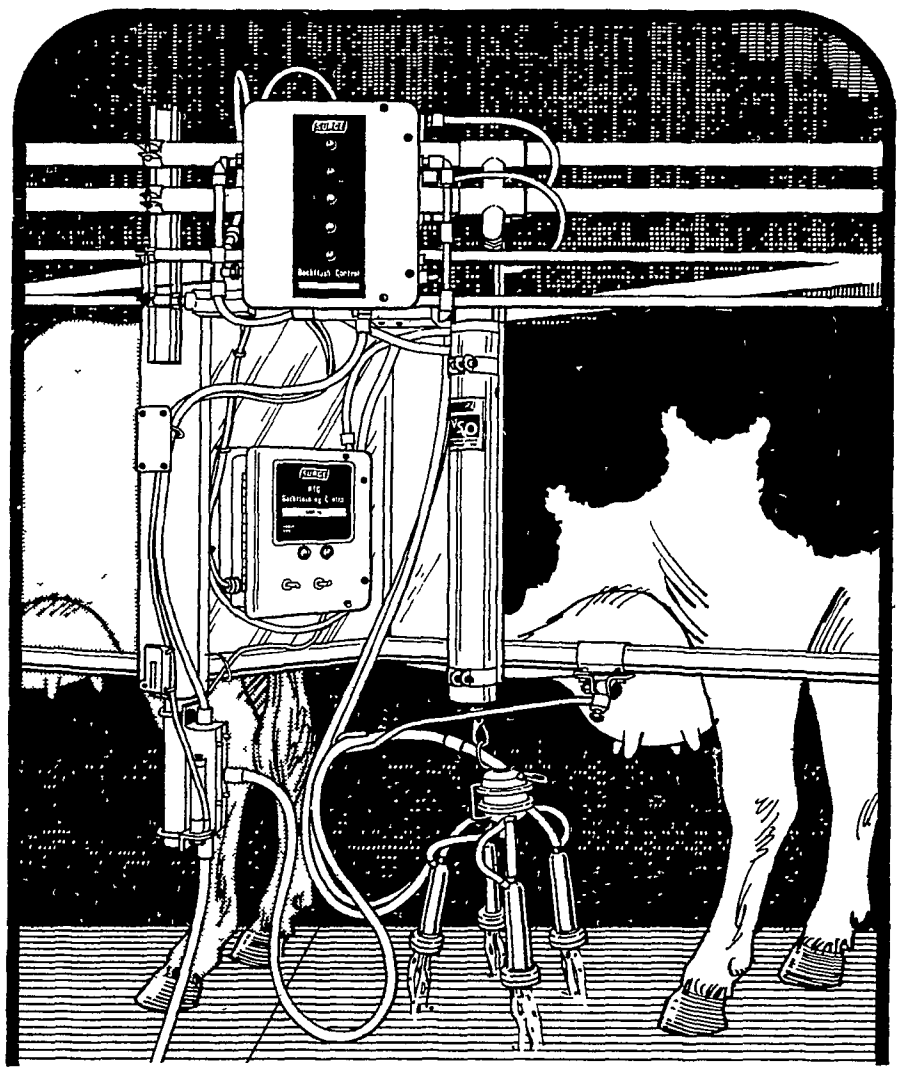
THE SURGE BACKFLUSH SYSTEM . . .

THE AUTOMATIC WAY TO CONTROL MASTITIS!



The Surge Blackflush System can cut your mastitis losses substantially by helping to prevent mastitis-causing bacteria from hiding in the milker inflations and getting a free ride from infected cows to healthy cows.

Here's how it works. After the cow is milked out, the milking unit is switched from the milk line to the backflushing position. The system then treats the milking unit to a four-stage cleaning and sanitizing process.

It's all done automatically in just a shade over a minute, completely independent of the operator.

Let us show you this automatic mastitis fighter.

We can make your cows worth more.

Berks Co. swine club holds banquet

BY LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

VIRGINVILLE — Members of the Berks County 4-H Swine Club ended another year of fellowship and competition with their annual awards banquet, held at the Virginville Grange, here.

4-H'ers were recognized for showmanship and fitting and Grand and Reserve Grand Champion Hogs shown at the annual 4-H Market Hog Round-up, held September 24th. Other members received trophies for best Blue Forms and Project Books in three age categories.

Entertainment during the evening was a slide presentation by Joyce Miller and Sandy (Miller) Fryer, Virginville, entitled "Handy Work of God." Ernst Miller, Master of the Berks Pomona Grange, welcomed the many guests in attendance.

Karen Smith, Shoemakersville, received a trophy sponsored by Eastern Pennsylvania Pork Producers for exhibiting the Grand Champion Hog at the County Round-up. The 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Smith is a student nurse and has only shown hogs for two years. Her entry was a Yorkshire gilt bred by Ray Hoffman, Bernville.

Dennis and Beth Cooper, Lenhartsville, were the sponsors of the Reserve Grand Champion trophy. This was awarded to Gary Rohrbach, 15, also of Shoemakersville. Gary is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lenard Rohrbach, his entry was a Duroc crossbred gilt.

Showmanship and Fitting awards were presented to the following: Showman and Fitter - 16 years and older - Cheryl Adam, Hamburg; Showman, 12 to 15 years - Kenianne Rarick, Reading; Fitter, 12-15 years - Jan Adam, Hamburg; Showman, 8-11 years - Steve Rohrbach, Shoemakersville; and Fitter, 8-11 years old - Greg Stricker, Bernville.

Sponsoring these awards were: Berks-Lehigh PCA and Federal Land Bank, Shoemakersville; DeKalb Seeds, Ernst Miller, representative; F.M. Brown's Sons, Birdsboro, Fleetwood, and Sinking Spring; Agway, Inc., Leesport; Anthony's Feed Mill, Strausstown; and Van Mar Feeds, Inc., Shoemakersville.

Outscoring the other 4-H'ers within her age group with her Blue Form was Cheryl Adam, 18. Mark Rohrbach, Shoemakersville, was awarded for the best form - between 12 and 15 years of age; and Steve Rohrbach was awarded for ages 8-11. Best Project Book honors were bestowed upon; Allan Rohrbach, Shoemakersville, for 16 years and over; Gary Rohrbach, Shoemakersville, 12-15; and Henry Seidel, Lenhartsville, ages 8-11.

These awards were sponsored by: Albright's Mill, Kempton; Mogel Brothers Feeds, Hamburg; Vigortone Feeds, New Tripoli; Kissling's Mill, Bernville; Ken-Rose Farm, Maiden Creek; and James Dietrich, Hamburg.

Officers of the 4-H Swine Club are: Darlene Dietrich, Hamburg, president; Allan Rohrbach - vice-president; Mark Rohrbach - secretary. The club members thanked the buyers of the Market hogs and held a drawing for door prizes.

Kenianne Rarick, Showman 12-15; Cheryl Adam, Showman and Fitter - 16 and older; Steve Rohrbach - Showman 8-11; and Jan Adam, Fitter 12-15.

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

It's a great feeling to know that you are the master of your farmlands . . . that when you treat your soil right, it will treat you right. Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range. A good pasture with a pH of 6.5 or higher, for example, will make 300 to 400 lbs. of beef per acre and produce up to $100 gross income per acre. This means with the help of lime, profits from pastures can compare favorably with feed or grain crops.

York Co. 4-H holds Achievement day program

BAIR — Michele Bankert and Bill Wise were crowned the York 4-H clubs' king and queen during Achievement Day ceremonies held Sunday at the 4-H Center. The pair represented the Jefferson community club, which also captured the large traveling trophy as outstanding club of the year.

A six-year member of the 4-H program, Michele is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bankert, Hanover R3. She's secretary of the County Council and a member of the county swine club, with swine projects as her main interest.

Michele is a member of the county's state-winning meats judging team and will travel with the team in November to national competition at the Kansas City Royal Livestock Exposition.

At recent KILE judging in Harrisburg, she placed in the top ten, was on the third-placed team at Richmond, Virginia, judging, and finished 13th at the Timonium, Maryland, junior stockman contest.

A 17-year-old senior at Spring Grove High School, Michele is studying business and plans a career in that field.

Bill Wise is also a six-year 4-H'er, and a member of last year's state meats-judging team that traveled to the Kansas City national competition. He was a state competitor this year in the public speaking field.

An enthusiastic beef exhibitor, Bill is vice-president of the county Beef club, a teen leader, and member of County Council. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dennis, Spring Grove R2, and he's a junior at Spring Grove High School.

Other 4-H royalty finalists were Beverly Eisenhart, Kathy Eyster, Robert Livingston and Roy Thompson.

Three special awards went to members who kept outstanding records of club activities. Annette Shermyer of the Davidsburg Club was chosen the outstanding secretary and Darcey Feeser, Hanover club, was named top historian. Outstanding news reporter was Christine Shive, who handled the news account for both the Glen Rock and county beef clubs.

Two first-year members went home with trophies sponsored by the York Chamber of Commerce for exceptional accomplishments in their initial year of project participation. Frank Lecrone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lecrone, Lineboro, Maryland, was selected the outstanding rookie boy.

Rookie girl winner was Cathy Shive, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Shive, Seven Valleys, R1.

Other junior awards from the Chamber of Commerce were presented to Troy Goodling of Seven Valleys, the outstanding boy, Christine Shive, Seven Valleys, as the outstanding girl, and Mike Welsh, East Berlin, in the area of achievement.

Named outstanding winners overall were seniors Roy Thompson, East Berlin, and Lisa Dobrosky, Glen Rock. Outstanding senior boy was Bryan Palmer of Shrewsbury and Judy Waltersdorff was chosen outstanding senior girl.

Other senior special awards went to Jon Janney, Brodbecks, and Dawn Raubenstine, Hanover, for achievement, Bill Wise, Spring Grove, and Susan Janney, Brodbecks, for citizenship, and Steve Trostle, Red Lion, and Nancy Eisenhart, East Berlin, for leadership. The Chamber of Commerce also sponsored all the outstanding senior awards.

A tableful of shiny trophies went out to a group of senior and junior individuals who were selected county winners in a variety of project areas. Builder Irvin Rappoldt of Glen Rock sponsored the handyman awards that went to Susan Eisenhart in the junior division and David Detter, senior winner. The Foley Manufacturing Company sponsored the food preparation award won by senior Nancy Eisenhart.

Other county trophies, presented by the county council, went to these junior

THE TIME IS NOW FOR PA. FARMERS

Ronald Reagan looks to the future and his programs for the nation are good for Pennsylvania farm families.

He will curb inflation; expand farm markets at home and abroad; remove excessive estate and gift taxes on family farms; reduce excessive government regulation of agriculture; select a Secretary of Agriculture who understands agriculture and who will speak up for farmers.

We believe that Ronald Reagan is the only Presidential candidate who offers farmers hope for the future. This is why we Pennsylvania farmers are for Reagan-Bush.

Bergland to speak at National Grange meeting

LANCASTER — Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland will be guest speaker at the 114th annual session of the National Grange to be held November 10 to 16 in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Bergland will address delegates and members at a Rural America Luncheon on Friday, November 14 at Stouffer's Five Seasons Hotel. His appearance will be one of the first by a Cabinet officer following the Presidential election.

Ed Andersen, Master of the National Grange, said, "We will either be extending congratulations or condolsences to the Secretary, but regardless of the outcome, we are delighted to have him with us."

This is the first time since 1909 that the Grange has held its national convention in Iowa. Thousands of Mid-Westerners are expected to attend the seven day meeting.

Andersen said Grange delegates will be debating hundreds of resolutions, which originated at the local level, concerning agriculture, energy, transportation, taxation, foreign affairs, education and health. "Heavy emphasis will be on agriculture since a new farm program is due next year," said Andersen.

Other activities during the convention will include announcements of national winners in Grange sponsored contests and the selection of Grange Youth of the Year.

Displays of needlework, arts and crafts will be open to the public from Wednesday, November 12 through Saturday, November 15 at Stouffer's Hotel.

York Holstein Assn. holds annual meeting

JACOBUS — A gift of dairy judging slides has been presented by the York County Holstein Association to the county's extension service.

Presentation of the slide series from cattle photographer Danny Weaver was one of the highlights of the association's annual dinner meeting, held last Friday evening at the Jacobus Fire Hall.

Three new directors were elected to the board during a brief business meeting. Serving three year terms will be Michael Stewart, Airville R1, Carl Anderson, Spring Grove, and Douglas Cope, York.

John Morris, retired University of Maryland dairy specialist and current secretary of the Maryland Holstein Association, was the special guest speaker. A long-time coach of the Maryland state 4-H dairy judging team, Morris has worked with several national winning teams, including one group that traveled to England to take part in international competition.

"Let them make some mistakes," he advised, in his "Building A Foundation" suggestions on encouraging dairy youth. "They'll learn to make decisions; they'll have some disappointments."

Morris urged his audience of 130 to help young 4-H and FFA members get a calf, let them have part in selecting it, study the size age, and health requirements and to decide on ways to help pay for the calf.

Morris added that it's not necessary for youngsters to stand at the top of a show class because they'll learn valuable lessons regardless of their placing, and they'll become aware of the importance of record keeping.

During his many years teaching at the University, Morris was instrumental in adding a few new twists to dairy activities. One he recalled was the now popular "pretty cow contests", which he remembered having first seen at an Oklahoma cattle show.

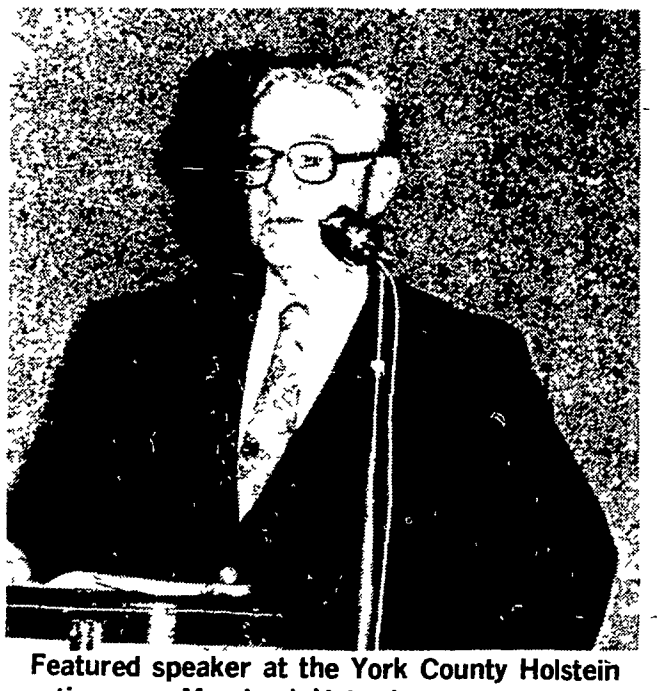
A dairy-venture for inner-city children was another innovative program on his dairy students, begun with youngsters from downtown Baltimore. Besides learning dairy information, the children were taken to a farm, and once made home-made ice cream, which Morris remembered "they ate up before it had even gotten hard."

To keep younger members growing into the Holstein organizations, Morris urged his listeners to see that youth had part in the arrangements and programs of planned activities.

He also invited all members, youth and adults, to take part in the 1981 national Holstein convention, to be hosted by the Maryland Association at the Baltimore convention center.-JB.



Featured speaker at the York County Holstein meeting was Maryland Holstein secretary John Morris.

Loan guarantees to finance 15 fuel alcohol plants

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Federal financial guarantees have been approved for 15 new plants in 14 states to help launch the United States on a substantial program for fuel alcohol production, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland said last Friday.

"These projects," Bergland said, "will produce more than half of the national production goal set by President Carter in his message of Jan. 11, 1980. At that time, the President set a goal of 500 million gallons of alcohol and methane production by the end of 1981 as a supplement and alternative to petroleum fuels."

Bergland said $341.6 million of loans by banks and other private financial institutions will be guaranteed by the Farmers Home Administration for building of plants to produce an estimated 246 million gallons of ethanol per year.

FmHA, the rural credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, will guarantee the loans under its authority to support business and industrial development in rural areas, said Bergland.

The agency previously has approved $36,209,470 of loan guarantees for 14 other plants with ethanol production capacity totaling approximately 18 million gallons per year.

"The projects announced today," Bergland said, "combined with those previously approved, far exceed the $100 million goal set when the USDA agency opened its rural business and industrial program to fuel alcohol plant projects last January. Projects approved by the agency account for about 264 million gallons, or more than one half of the 500-million gallon production goal set by the President. When he announced his target in January, annual fuel alcohol production was about 80 million gallons nationally."

Use of the USDA loan guarantee authority gave the nation a thrust forward on fuel alcohol development, pending passage of special synfuels legislation which was enacted and signed by the president last June, Bergland said.

None of the plants are in Pennsylvania.

Under the synfuels program, USDA will administer a $525 million loan program for building biomass energy production facilities, including fuel alcohol plants of up to 15 million-gallon annual production capacity. Most larger plants developed under the synfuels program will obtain federal financing through the U.S. Department of Energy.

The 15 projects announced today involve about $482 million of plant construction costs, of which about 80 percent will be financed through USDA-guaranteed loans. A business and industrial loan guarantee covers up to 90 percent of any net loss a lender might incur, Bergland said.

Most of the plants will use corn as a feedstock, although some will use other grains and other commodities such as molasses and potatoes, If all used corn, the total annual consumption would amount to more than 110 million bushels, he said.

The alcohol production would replace approximately 6.3 million barrels of oil a year for use as motor fuel. Most of the plants will use coal or wood products for boiler fuel.

USDA has approved plans for the project submitted by developers subject to acceptance by lenders and borrowers of conditions imposed to meet the requirements. The loan guarantees to be issued by the agency will be put into effect only after the construction of the alcohol fuel plants have been built and have met agency operating performance standards.

Most projects plan to be in operation by the end of 1981, Bergland said.

DROUGHT DISASTER PREVENTION IS BETTER THAN DROUGHT DISASTER PAYMENTS

You don't get the payments unless it is quite serious. Also government handouts just increase the taxes.

"BACK TO NATURE" FARMING DOESN'T MAKE IT RAIN but it conserves much more of the rain. At least there is something that makes our customers crops better than most competition this year, especially our 2nd and 3rd year customers. Or do you think it may be the plant food that did it? We believe it is both. And some grow commercial tomatoes and cantaloupes without spraying with practically no damage from bugs and disease. And some have about half again more protein than competition in field crops and half again higher sugar reading in vegetables, better keeping quality and earlier maturity. Figure how many extra dollars worth of protein you would get off a field at today's price of 40% protein feed.

NATIONAL AG SOIL TREATMENT (a liquid spray, better than the former soil conditioner, proven by Penn State) breaks hardpan and lets the water down. Guaranteed. When drought comes, the water seeps up again like a wick effect. Also, roots can go down when hardpan is broken.

NEMATODES, AFLOTOXIN and EXOTIC NEWCASTLE DISEASE ARE GETTING MORE PREVALENT according to page D31 and C36 of the Oct. 18 Lancaster Farming. It says "Aftoxin affected corn is all but useless on the market as it cannot be formulated safely into most animal feed products." The trouble is some farmers feed it and don't know it till their vet bill gets too high.

WHEN WILL AGRICULTURE AGENCIES AND FARMERS WAKE UP TO THE CAUSE OF DISEASE?

If you drive on a man's toes and he hollers, should you get off or cut out his tongue? You can't beat the Creator's plan or instructions. Do you use a John Deere manual for a Ford? "Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? Are we stronger than He?" 1 Cor. 10:22.

OUR PROGRAM COSTS LESS THAN CHEMICALS ON A YEARLY BASIS after the first year our BX bacteria spray saves you very much fertilizer, about half, more or less, while at same time helps prevent bugs, nematodes and aflotoxin pestilences. Did our forefathers have those troubles before they used chemical fertilizer? Now by using toxic sprays to try to cure the effect of toxic fertilizer, you intensify the problem-a vicious cycle indeed! There are already many sorry farmers and it will get worse, but fortunately also many happy ones - our customers.

WE HAVE A PROGRAM WITH SOIL TESTING AND CONSULTATION THAT WORKS. Most of our materials are best applied in the all. And our Fla. phosphate supplier already has trouble getting enough empty R.R. cars for our demand. Better get it now. Spread while soil is dry including pastures. It glues to the soil and doesn't leach. soil tests are $15 with consultation. We make recommendations for your benefit, more than ours, with service. It is not a grab your check and run deal.

DEALERS WANTED FOR NATIONAL AG SOIL TREATMENT AND BX. They will soon get popular and easy to sell. Easy to carry in gallon jugs. Get your territory now and then help farmers survive. Fall is also the best time to apply these products. Free literature.

Berks County holds FFA leadership training

Conference last Tuesday at the Tulpehocken High School.

Ninety-one FFA members representing the County's seven FFA Chapters participated in the program.

Larry Shrawder, State FFA President and member of the Kutztown FFA Chapter discussed the State and National FFA Programs available to the FFA members.

He encouraged the FFA members attending the conference to set their goals now and work towards them.

"Even if it is too early to apply for the American Farmer Degree now, it's not too early to plan for it," he remarked. "Once you begin to fill out the forms it's too late to participate and do some of the activities you wish you would have done."

In-depth leadership sessions were conducted by other state officers for the county FFA members.

The subjects studied were: Chapter Participation - conducted by Judy Zimmerman, State Secretary; Student Projects, conducted by James Tretter - State Regional Vice-President; and Community Programs, conducted by Robert Kreider - State Treasurer. FFA members had the opportunity to attend two of the three sessions during the evening.

FFA members were also shown a slide presentation entitled "Sights and Sounds of the 51st National FFA Convention," and had the opportunity to participate in Greenhand and Chapter Farmer Contests.

Results of these contests follow:

Inter-State reaffirms support

SOUTHAMPTON — Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative last week reaffirmed a long standing position of total support of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, Milk Marketing Law, and in general the operation of the Board under that law.

James E. Honan, general manager of Inter-State, outlined the above position to Secretary of Agriculture, Penrose Hallowell in a letter wherein he further called for the getting together of representatives of Lehigh Valley Farmers and other dairy cooperatives in Pennsylvania to see if there is a way that dairy farmers can help guide milk pricing activities for their benefit.

Honan stated that Inter-State's support of wholesale and resale pricing in Pennsylvania has been premised on the fact that if minimum prices to dairy farmers are provided, then the balance of the industry should also have some pricing protection.

The letter to Secretary Hallowell indicated that Inter-State has never held itself out to be a policeman of the Milk Marketing Board.

Inter-State markets in excess of two billion pounds of milk a year from 3000 dairy farmer members in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Del. proposes tax incentives to preserve farmland

DOVER, Del. — Agriculture is Delaware's leading industry. But the Governor's Advisory Committee on Farmland Preservation predicts that farmland will decline from the current 53 percent of Delaware's total land area down to 35 percent by the year 2000 unless action is taken.

Since March, representatives from farm groups, real estate, government, and the Delaware Extension Service who make up the Governor's Advisory Committee have been studying the causes of farmland loss. They have developed a package of recommendations designed to preserve the state's dwindling farmland.

Under the plan, the state government would set up a system of exclusive agricultural zoning acceptable to Delawareans. The plan would include financial and other incentives to landowners for keeping land in agriculture within these zones. The public would have a say in the location of the zones.

A farmer would receive a state income tax credit for each acre of farmland owned in an exclusive agricultural zone.

For example, if these tax credits were set at $5 per acre, a farmer with 500 acres would receive a $2500 state income tax credit every year.

The loss of revenues to the state for such a program would amount to about $3 million annually (since approximately 600,000 acres of farmland might be placed in exclusive agricultural zones). The income tax credit would be a substantial incentive, yet a relatively small proportion of the state's budget.

Farmland within the exclusive agricultural zones would be exempted from all general property and school taxes, except those that directly benefit agriculture such as farm drainage taxes.

Farm residences, however, would still be subject to the same property taxes as neighboring non-farm residences.

This provision of the plan would result in possibly a $2 million annual loss of revenues to local governments and school districts. The state would compensate the affected jurisdictions in a declining way for three years, to give them time to develop alternative revenue sources.

Delaware's inheritance tax law would also be revised under the plan. Under the committee's proposal, the Delaware inheritance tax on farms in exclusive agricultural zones could be deferred and later paid in installments at low interest. This would give the heirs a chance to build up their farm businesses before having to make large outlays of cash.

The state capital gains tax schedules would be revised to allow either deferral of the gain, spreading the gain over an extended period, or an exemption of part of the gain when transferred farmland within the zone is kept in agriculture.

The real property transfer tax would be revised to place a ceiling on the tax when farmland in the zone is kept in agriculture.

Another proposal would consolidate, eliminate, and simplify the system of permits, approvals and certifications applicable to agricultural operations within the exclusive agricultural zones.

Farmlands in the path of urban development, such as those zoned for nonagricultural uses or served by sewer, would not be part of exclusive agricultural zones. The Governor's Advisory Committee recognizes the likelihood that such farms would eventually succumb to pressures to develop.

However, the committee realizes that these farms are important to the state's economy and quality of life, so a proposal is designed to keep these lands in agriculture as long as possible, if not indefinitely.

Farmers who own land outside of exclusive agricultural zones could participate voluntarily in one part of the farmland preservation program.

To do so they would sign a five-year contract, subject to yearly renewals, agreeing to keep the land in agriculture. In return the farmer would receive the state income tax credits each year.

Del. farm preservation

ipate in the farmland eservation program and p it benefits would have to pay penalties and rollback taxes if they take land out of agriculture.

Sometimes government actions contribute to the loss of farmland. For example, governmental bodies are not likely to think about the possible effect on farmland when they approve construction of on-site sewage disposal facilities, sewer collection and tranmission systems, solid waste disposal, roads, schools, hospitals, etc.

Rural areas are often favored for new public facilities and highways because it is easier and cheaper to build there than in or near cities. But when these improvements go in, more development of farmland usually follows.

Federal, state and local housing and mortgage financing programs also often foster rural development. Up until now such programs have included no formal review or consideration of impact on agriculture.

The Governor's Advisory Committee says that public agencies ought to be required by law to consider the impact on agriculture of public facility design and location decisions, and should attempt to limit direct access from adjacent properties to regional transportation and utility systems.

Some farmland loss is the result of rezoning and subdivision approvals even without actual development. The rezoning of agricultural land for other uses and the recording of preliminary subdivision plans tend to inflate the price of land beyond its agricultural value.

No tax penalties are associated with the rezoning or recording of preliminary subdivision plans. This encourages nonfarm ownership of farmland for speculative purposes. The committee believes that if land is rezoned for nonagricultural use, it should be reassessed immediately.

The new revenue would also help replace taxes lost due to the farmland preservation tax credits. Furthermore, unless the property is used for its approved purpose within a set period of time, the land should automatically revert back to its original agricultural zoning, and any subdivision approvals should be voided.

Some of the conflicts between farmers and nonfarmers over complaints about farm operations and unplanned extensions of utilities, services and transportation facilities are due to the proliferation of small, generally unregulated road-front subdivisions. The committee recommends that county ordinances should subject all such proposed subdivisions to review regarding their impact on agriculture.

Public hearings on the committee's recommendations are scheduled for November. The times and locations are as follows: Monday, November 10, 7 p.m., Capital Grange, South Governors Avenue, Dover; Thursday, November 13, 7 p.m., Delaware Technical and Community College, Southern Campus, Rooms 244 A and B, Georgetown; and Monday, November 17, 7 p.m., Gunning Bedford Junior High School Auditorium, Cox Neck Road (County Road 411 near Delaware City).

The Committee will present final recommendations to the Governor by the end of the year.

Breeders name new president

ELBURN, Ill. — Robert F. Boese, a 28 year company veteran, has been named President of Curtiss Breeding Service, according to Thomas B. Neff, Chief Executive Officer of Curtiss Breeding Industries Inc., the parent company.

Curtiss Breeding Service merchandises bovine semen through approximately 400 distributors in the United States.

Boese joined Curtiss Candy Company as a trainee in 1947. In 1949 he was transferred to the Curtiss Candy Company Farm Division when Curtiss entered the artificial field. At the end of 1954, he left Curtiss for a four year stint with Electric Auto-Lite, returning to Curtiss in 1959 as Director of Research. Since 1959 he has served as head of the Production Center, Vice President for

Injectable iron for pigs

LANCASTER — A new injectable iron that provides 200 mg of iron in a single one ml dose has been linked with improved overall hog performance and disease resistance, according to Lionel L. Reilly, Continental Animal Health, Omaha.

Gleptosil is being introduced to the United States this Fall by CAH. The injectable iron is manufactured by Fisons Limited of England, the same company that developed iron dextran 25 years ago.

Reilly says Gleptosil was developed to meet the needs of growing pigs that rarely receive sufficient iron to carry them through weaning even when they are injected with 100 mg. iron.

He adds, "Sub-clinical iron deficiencies increase a pig's susceptibility to disease. And based on United States field trials on Gleptosil, hogs injected with the new iron source are better able to weather a disease outbreak such as transmissable gastroenteritis (TGE)."

British field trials on the product also show an improved livability rate for baby pigs injected with Gleptosil. Comparing litters injected with a 200 mg dose of iron dextran to a 200 mg dose of gleptoferron (the active agent in Gleptosil), moralities dropped by 2.5 percent among pigs injected with Gleptosil.

"In addition to providing the iron necessary for a pig to reach its genetic growth potential, and for resistance to disease and mortality, Gleptosil is absorbed rapidly and is extremely non-toxic," Reilly says.

"Almost all of the iron is absorbed within 24 hours. This prevents the possibility of ham staining. And safety of the product was demonstrated in field trials when Gleptosil, at six times the common iron dose (6 ml), was injected into baby pigs with no ill effects to the animal... not even lameness."

His 'retirement rocking chair' is a horse

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

REINHOLDS — Some men, when they finish out one career and begin to point their vocational efforts more in the direction of retirement, may think of a rocking chair.

But not Lester Weber, of R1 Reinholds, Lancaster County.

His "retirement rocking chair" comes in the guise of the smooth, rolling gait of the Tennessee Walking Horses he has been breeding and raising for the past half-decade.

His operation, one of the largest in the Northeast for Walkers, numbers as high as 25 head in the spring when the brood mares are in foal.

His breeding of the Tennessee Walkers, which Weber describes as the ultimate in pleasure horses, was a back-to-the-land goal he has been striving to reach for quite a few years.

"I grew up on a farm in the vicinity of the Bergstrasse School near Ephrata," he explained.

"I always loved horses and enjoyed working them on the farm. You might say I stumbled into the raising and breeding when we later got our first Walker as a plaeasure horse. I read up on them and started studding."

Weber launched the operation while still working as a sales rep for a publishing company, covering a six-state area.

"I had a sense of frustration and tension," he said.

"I was gone from Monday morning to Friday night. That's not my ideal way of living."

So, the family's pleasure horse hobby evolved into a Tennessee Walking Horse breeding farm and Weber began spending fulltime at it during the past summer.

"Now, I can spend more time with the horses," he said, "as well as potential customers."

He presently maintains one stallion and a half-dozen brood mares. Overall inventory can range from 15 to 25 horses, depending on the season of the year.

His stud stallion is a big, husky black, nearly 16 hands high, named Senator's Thunder, who is out of the World Grand Champion, Ebony's Senator.

One of his mares is directly out of Sun's Delight, current World Grand Champion standing at stud at Shadow Valley Farm near Shelbyville, Tn. Another mare is directly out of Mack K's Handshake, a World Grand Champion standing at stud at Stallion Stables, also near Shelbyville.

He has had good mating results with his stallion and other mares, which trace bloodlines back to Midnight Sun and Merry Go Boy, two top breeding stallions.

Other animals he acquires directly from Tennessee or Kentucky, the bastions of Tennessee Walking Horse country.

"When my inventory gets down," he said, "I concentrate on bringing in only quality animals and have been able to get some outstanding ones. I try for the complete package – well broken, nice looking, size and good disposition."

Weber describes the Walker as the ultimate pleasure horse because it combines all of the needed characteristics – a spirited mount with a gentle disposition that has tremendous strength and stamina, plus the smooth, easy gait desired by riders spending many hours in the saddle.

The Walker has gradually evolved from multiple cross-breeding, which has included the Southern Plantation Walking Horse, the Thoroughbred, Standardbred, Morgan and American Saddlebred.

Since its beginning in the Tennessee hill country, it has been a very versatile horse.

Currently, they're used in barrel races, in single or double hitches ranging from carriages and sleighs to manure spreaders, by cowboys working the high country of Montana, Wyoming or Idaho, police in New York City, rangers in state parks, and countless pleasure horse owners, particularly those running bird dogs in field trials.

Weber has sold horses as far away as Rhode Island, New York and New Jersey. Three mounts have gone to Bob Abric, of Bernville, Berks County, who participates in the Field Trials circuit in the Northeast.

Prices of the Walkers range from $900 - $1000 for unpapered, quality horses to $1500 - $1800 for registered top-of-the-line animals.

The Weber farms covers 85 acres northwest of Reinholds, including five acres of woodland, 30 tillable and 50 acres of pastureland, which provides a sizeable exercise area for the Walkers.

Presently Weber is branching out in another agricultural direction with a 60,000-layer poultry house.

But the Walking Horses remain his primary agricultural pursuit.

"I'm trying to continually upgrade the breeding operation to improve the quality of the animals and maintain a source of good, quality pleasures horses for the Northeast."

Fallow farm gets face-lifts as conservation park

GAITHERSBURG, Md. — Undaunted by the overcast and drizzling skies that hung over Gaithersburg on October 11, about 500 spectators and 100 volunteer workers turned out Saturday to launch the Izaak Walton League's new conservation park.

While bulldozers and graders roared in the background, an impressive collection of county, state and national officials praised the League's efforts and spoke of the importance of natural resource conservation.

Keynoting the morning program was Robert Herbst, assistant secretary of the U.S. Department of the Interior. Herbst set the tone for following speakers when he congratulated the IWLA's Lois Green Chapter, on behalf of President Carter and himself, on "this gift of land that will be held for the youth and adults of this area and for what you are doing to improve it."

Following Herbst at the podium were Congressman Michael Barnes; Senator James Clark, president of the Maryland Senate; Charles Gilchrist, Montgomery County Executive; Royce Hanson, chairman of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission; John McLaughlin, president of the IWLA's Maryland State Division; Jack Lorenz, executive director of the national IWLA, David P. Doss, assistant state conservationist for the USDA's Soil Conservation Service and Gary Margheim, environmental coordinator for the SCS national office. Neal Potter, Montgomery County Council chairman, stopped by later in the day.

The highlight of the morning came when the chapter dedicated the new park to Malcolm E. King. King, described by associates as a "con man for conservation," was credited with organizing the field day and lining up over $200,000 worth of materials, equipment and labor in contributions.

In fact, it was King who persuaded the late Lois Green to donate the 55 acres of farm and forestland to the IWLA's Sligo Chapter and an adjacent 220 acres to the county's park and planning commission. Saturday's events in the transformation of the fallow land into a conservation park that will be open to civic groups and schools for conservation activities and nature study.

The focus of the field day was the completion of a soil, water and wildlife conservation plan. Designed by SCS in cooperation with the Montgomery Soil Conservation District, the purpose of the conservation measures was to improve the resources of the immediate area and improve water quality downstream.

While onlookers strolled the grounds, four bulldozers, provided by Worthy Brothers and F.E. Gregory and Sons, began carving a 1-acre pond. Adult volunteers laid sod donated by Paul Pearson and helped Ernie Musser and Sons landscape the lawn around the chapter house.

Nearby a well drilling rig was demonstrated by Easterday Well Drillers and the Maryland and Delaware Drillers Association.

Over 7,000 wildlife shrubs and pine trees, provided by the Maryland Wildlife Administration, were planted by 53 members of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club and other volunteers. A.B. Viers and Rockville Crushed Stone contributed over 40 truckloads of gravel used on the new access road.

There were other activities as well, including conservation exhibits, solar panels, nature trails, and a gasohol still managed by Charles Savage and Senator Clark.

It was Clark who best summed up the spirit of the day.

Remarking to another worker, Clark said "After the kids left, I picked up one of the planting bars and started planting some of those trees. Before I knew it, there were a dozen other people doing the same thing. That shows how contagious conservation is."

Check water supply before winter

NEW HOLLAND — Some areas of Pennsylvania may have home water supplies inadequate to meet the demands of modern living, says N. Henry Wooding, extension agricultural engineer, Penn State.

The flow from springs and wells that was satisfactory several years ago may not be enough for a modern home with multiple bathrooms and automatic dishwashers and laundry equipment.

Homeowners and others who depend on springs for their water supplies should check their sources before winter begins. Inspect the spring site and locate the primary water flow. Remove silt, sand, and debris down to the rock or impervious layer. If necessary, build a head wall or lay a drain tile to intercept seepage occurring in the wet area. Construct a good tight concrete or masonry box to provide the storage necessary to meet the peak demand.

Even though a steady flow may be only a few gallons per hour, if it is intercepted and stored, the flow during the 24-hour period may provide enough water to satisfy the daily requirement.

Anyone who contemplates developing a spring for a new source of water should realize that most springs are recharged with surface water percolating through shallow layers of soil and rock and in many instances the water will be polluted and not safe to drink.

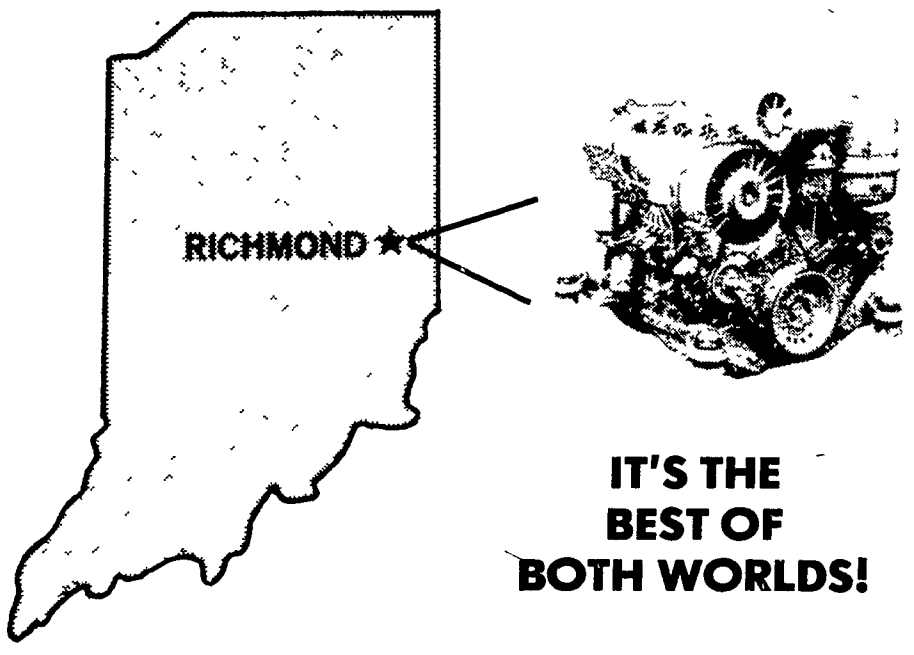
DEUTZ DIESELS FROM INDIANA?



IT'S THE BEST OF BOTH WORLDS!

Deutz customers know from experience that Deutz diesels are a creation of German engineering and production craftsmanship. All those happy Deutz users will be even happier to learn that — NOW DEUTZ DIESELS ARE MADE IN USA - at an engine plant Deutz purchased in Richmond, Indiana

Domestic production in the 20-160 hp range gives us and our Deutz customers a tremendous advantage over all other air-cooled diesels.

Invest in a sure thing - Deutz diesels have been famous for fuel economy and reliability since Amos Stauffer first sold Deutz diesels in this area - 25 years ago We are equally famous for superb Deutz service.

Don't just buy a "bargain" diesel which is supposed to be "built like a Deutz". BUY A DEUTZ AND BE SURE YOU HAVE MADE A GOOD INVESTMENT. A Deutz diesel will usually recover the difference in price thru fuel savings alone within one year.

Polled Hereford Assn. cites registration leaders

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Polled Hereford breeders from Missouri, Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Tennessee tallied the most registrations in the American Polled Hereford Association this past fiscal year. And South Dakotan Chester Gullikson again led the way in most registrations by an individual breeder.

According to figures released by APHA at the end of August, the Bath, South Dakota-based Gullikson Polled Herefords retained the top spot it gained last year with 664 registrations this year.

Other leading registrants, with 250 or more, and the number of calves they entered on the APHA record were: Ogeechee Farms, Fairland, Okla., 580; Antonio Mountain Ranch, Petaluma, Calif., 501; Glenkirk Farms, Maysville, Mo., 441; Wooden Shoe Farms, Othello, Wash., 348; Joe Harvey, Jakin, Ga., 316; E.B. Gee Ranch, East Prairie, Mo., 305; Felton Hereford Ranch, Maryville, Mo., 284; J. Hoy Hathorn, Louisville, Miss., 278; Lowell Burgett, Scobey, Mont., 272; CMR, Senatobia, Miss., 267; and DuVall Ranches, Granada, Colo., 251.

Memberships in the breed organization climbed seven percent over last year to 2398 new adult members this year. And new junior memberships hit 1275 for a 12 percent increase.

"We find this number, which brings our total membership to nearly 45,000, to be especially encouraging in view of the financial difficulties and weather extremes the beef industry has faced this past year," said APHA President T.D. "Dusty" Rich. "It's also interesting to note that these increased memberships are following on the heels of a whopping 23.7 percent increase the previous year."

Leading states in memberships were Missouri, Texas, Tennessee, Ohio and Illinois.

Other categories covered in the report were total registrations at 151,658; transfers at 99,368; and Guide Lines (performance program) processings at 69,047, up more than 10 percent over the previous year.

A special message to farmers who appreciate the difference...

PRICE vs. VALUE
in liquid fertilizer

When the first thing a fertilizer salesman wants to talk about is a "bargain basement price," you can be pretty sure that's all he really has to offer

We're cost-sensitive at NA-CHURS, too But because we're dedicated to selling quality, we like to discuss value— at a fair price Here's what NA-CHURS has to offer

☐ Highest quality product. Remember, first, that NA-CHURS liquid fertilizer is a precisely-formulated, complete liquid plant food — not just a blend of raw materials Just because another fertilizer may have the same basic NPK ratio, does not make it the "same" fertilizer That's because NA-CHURS starts with only the highest-quality raw materials These are formulated into a solution that won't separate and settle out like many poor-quality, suspension liquids That's why NA-CHURS stores safely over winter, giving you the advantage of lower fall prices and planting time application as early as you're ready

☐ Extra service — at no extra cost. NA-CHURS customers know that what comes with a fertilizer is just as important as what goes in it The NA-CHURS Program includes year 'round extra services — all at no extra cost

☐ Composite soil samples are taken and a written fertility recommendation for each field is supplied by NA-CHURS agronomists No charge!

☐ Your NA-CHURS Representative assists with installation and calibration of liquid equiment No charge!

☐ Follow-up service Your NA-CHURS man is on hand throughout the growing season — to help your crops reach full yield potential

☐ Special credit terms and discounts are an important part of the NA-CHURS program You help us plan for production, and we'll help you save money

These are just some of the extras that we call SERVICE — to help you achieve optimum yields and after-cost profits That's what the NA-CHURS program is all about See your NA-CHURS man and talk about the real differences between price and value

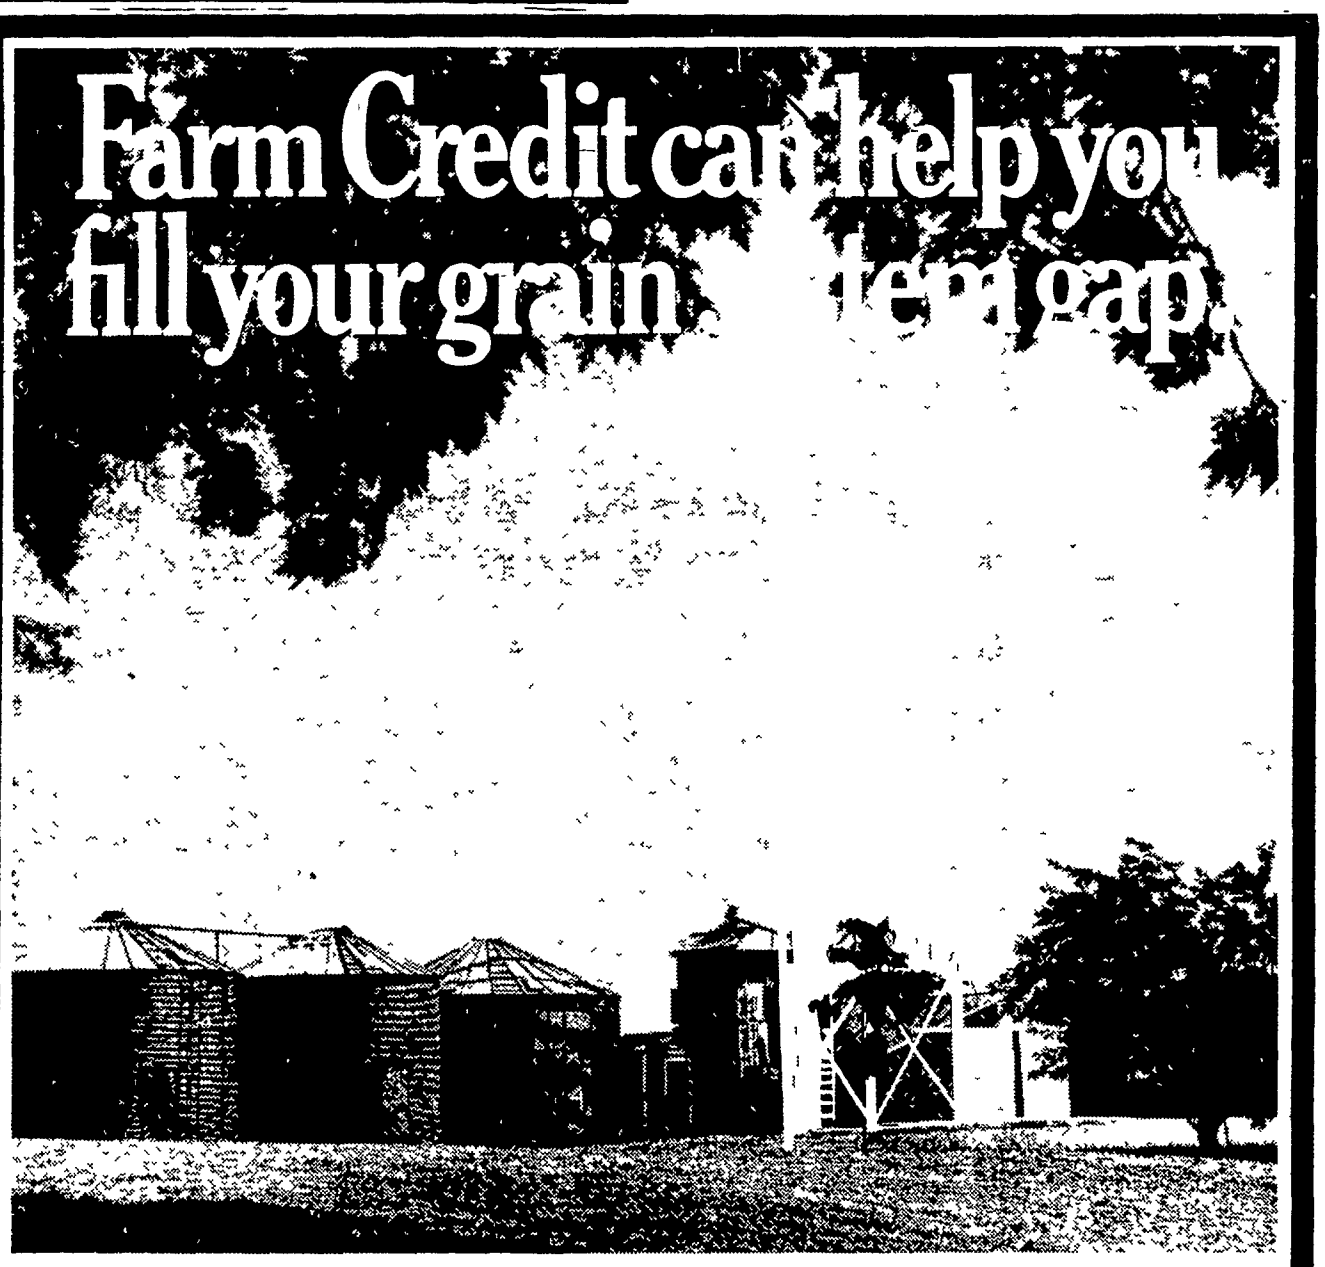
Farm Credit can help you fill your grain [illegible]



What's the easiest way to get money for a grain drying and storage system? Talk to the people who understand why you need it. At Farm Credit we speak your language...and that makes getting any farm loan a whole lot easier.

WE'LL HELP WITH LOW RATES

Look around. Check prevailing interest rates. Then check in at your Farm Credit office. If you shop for your grain system loan as carefully as you shop for your grain system...we think you'll see the advantage of a Farm Credit loan.

YOUR PAYMENTS WILL FIT YOUR INCOME PATTERN

At Farm Credit, we always try to schedule your payments around your peak income periods. So you pay us when your crops or livestock pay you.

LET'S TALK...YOUR PLACE OR OURS

You'll always get prompt attention at your Farm Credit office. And if you're too busy to make the trip in, give us a call. We'll come to you. Most of us were brought up on farms, and we know how tough it is to break loose sometimes. It all comes down to this. Whether you need money for a grain system or any other farm-related need, chances are, Farm Credit can help. Drop by or give us a call. You'll find that we're your kind of people.

FOR MORE INFORMATION, CONTACT YOUR LOCAL COUNTY OFFICE.

Ag museum to run harvest festival

DOVER, Del. — A full day of traditional Country music will highlight the Delaware Agricultural Museum's first Fall Harvest Festival. The event will be held at the museum site in Dover October 18 with activities getting under way at 10 a.m. and ending at 5 p.m.

Ola Belle Reed and Family, a nationally known group performing traditional music of the southern mountains, will be performing throughout the day along with the Old Grass, New Grass bluegrass band, the Roll Rythm String Band, the Levis and Laces Square Dancers and the Germantown Country Dancers.

These musical activities will be going on simultaneously at different locations on the museum grounds, according to Paul Parvis, director/curator of the Delaware Agricultural Museum. Visitors will be encouraged to join in the dancing and basic instructions will be provided.

Ola Belle Reed and Family have performed at major folk festivals for the past several years, including the Festival of American Folklife, the North Carolina Folklife Festival and the Philadelphia Folk Festival and the National Folk Festival. The group has recorded on Starday, Rounder and Folkways labels and has toured extensively throughout the eastern United States.

Other Harvest Festival activities, according to Parvis, include a corn husking bee, a cross-cut sawing contest and a number of traditional craft demonstrations including pump log boring, basket making, hewing, shingle splitting, blacksmithing, quilting, spinning, apple cider and apple butter making, and candle making.

Traditional harvest time food will be sold and the museum's gift shop will be open. The museum's collection of agricultural antiques, farm exhibits and buildings will also be displayed.

The Fall Harvest Festival will be held rain or shine. Admission will be $2 for adults, and $1 for senior citizens and children 10-16 years old. Children under 10 will be admitted free. Parking will also be free.

The Delaware Agricultural Museum is a private, non-profit educational foundation and the festival is being made possible in part through a grant from the Delaware State Arts Council, an agency of the state of Delaware, and the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency.

The museum grounds are located just south of the Delaware State College campus on route 13.

For more information on the festival or the museum call Dover 302/734-1618 or Newark 738-2505.

Maryland 4-H to honor members

TIMONIUM, Md. — More than 90 Maryland teen-agers and 27 adults will be honored during the second annual statewide 4-H recognition program and dinner on Sunday afternoon, October 26 at the state fairground in Timonium.

The event will begin at 3:45 p.m. in the new exhibit building.

There will be 46 state project 4-H winners and 43 recipients of the state 4-H clover award. Some individuals will be included in both categories, reports Maurice J. Spencer, assistant director of the University of Maryland's extension service. Spencer has statewide responsibility for 4-H youth programs.

All but three of the state project winners will be receiving expense-paid trips to the fifty-ninth National 4-H Congress in Chicago during the week of November 30 to December 4. Sixteen of the 43 trip winners will be sponsored by state businesses and organizations through the Maryland 4-H Club Foundation, Inc.

Two 4-H members from each Maryland county and from Baltimore city will comprise the contingent of 48 clover award recipients. Expenses for this recognition are being underwritten by the Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore.

The adults receiving honors are being recognized for their financial support, service and leadership in 4-H activities. Included in the list will be the first "Maryland 4-H Family of the Year" award.

Banquet entertainment is being provided by "A New Beginning," a newly formed teen-age 4-H choral group directed by Mr. and Mrs. Ronald T. (Debbie) Zepp of Westminister (Carroll County). The group gave its first public performances this summer during the Maryland State Fair in Timonium.

Eastern National posts cattle show results

TIMONIUM, Md. — Falkland Farms, Schellsburg, swept the Polled Hereford Show championships during the Eastern National Livestock Exposition held here recently.

Grand champion heifer of the show was an Enforcer 107H daughter, FLF Forcette 9002, calved January 1, 1979. She was tagged senior champion prior to her grand championship selection.

Following as reserve grand champion was the Falkland reserve senior champion, JJJ Miss Vici 904. She is a February 6, 1979 daughter of LS Beau Victor 1-30.

In the bull classes, the senior champion bull exhibited by Falklands went on to be tagged grand champion, also. FLF Stylish Mode 22, a May 2, 1978 son of FLF Distinguished took the honors.

Mohican TP Macho S1, the reserve senior bull, was tagged reserve grand champ. He is a senior yearling son of WSF PRL Justa Banner.

Other Pennsylvania exhibitors at Timonium showed well in individual classes. Show results are as follows:

Brief answers to short questions

Sheila's Shorts

By Sheila Miller

Spinning Circles

For the second week in a row, folks, one of the questions I'm about to address in my column has originated from — you guessed it — New York.

Direct from the Big Apple — New York City — came a note from R. Rinker, 415 East 52nd Street, A-4E, New York, New York 10022.

The note requested advice on spinning — what person of group to contact for information on the how-to's of this ancient craft.

Although I've always had an interest in sheep and practically grew up on my neighboring girl friend's ovine farm, I never quite managed to ever get involved in raising sheep or in learning the art of shearing, spinning or weaving.

Now, with everyone turning back to natural products, there has been a growing interest by guilds and others to resurrect and encourage the craft.

Realizing the interest, the American Wool Council's Wool Education Center has printed a booklet called Spinning Your Own Wool. It can be ordered by writing: American Wool Council, Wool Education Center, 200 Clayton Street, Denver, Colorado 80206. The cost of the booklet is $1.

Paula Simmons, Box 12 Suquamish, WA 98392 has published several articles on weaving and spinning in a number of publications.

Reprints of the articles can be ordered from her. Spinning and weaving articles, reprinted from Handweaver magazine are $1.80 plus 30 cents postage; spinning, weaving, and sheep articles, reprinted from Warp and Weft magazine are $1.60 plus 30 cents postage; and over thirty knit and crochet patterns for use with handspun wool yarn, Patterns for Handspun, are $1.35 plus 30 cents postage.

Simmons also has published a book, Spinning and Weaving With Wool. For information on ordering the book, write to Pacific Search Press, 222 Dexter Avenue, North, Washington 98109.

Another book that could be added to the beginner or experienced spinner's and weaver's library is Rachel Brown's The Weaving, Spinning, and Dyeing Book. The 336 page guide takes the craftsman through various steps from start to finish, with 434 line drawings to help illustrate the way. Published by Alfred A. Knopf, New York, New York, the cost of the book is $9.95 for paperback and $17.50 for hardback.

Another publication you might want to look into is the quarterly periodical, Shuttle, Spindle & Dyepot.

Published by the Handweavers Guild of America, the magazine gives in depth coverage to various aspects of the craft four times a year. Single copies can be purchased for $4.25, or a year's subscription can be taken out at $15 per year. Write to SS&D at 65 LaSalle Road, P.O. Box 7-374, West Hartford, CT 06107.

For [illegible], you might want to check in with the New York State Guild of Craftsmen. They should be able to direct you to spinning and weaving guilds in your area.

Another source of information might be the New York State's Association of Sheep and Wool Growers. Check with the New York State Department of Agriculture for help in who to contact in the association.

Happy reading. Just one question — where do you keep your sheep?

If you need fleeces, you might want to contact the Pennsylvania Cooperative Sheep and Wool Growers Association's secretary-treasurer, John Kimbark, R4 Box 524, Manheim, PA 17545. He might be able to help you in making the needed contacts.

Windmills — Where?

Standing silhouetted on a lot of old farms in Pennsylvania, an iron-framed workhorse seems turned out to pasture. It's limbs, broken in spots, whirl uselessly in the breeze as a creaking groan shouts its neglect to the wind.

Windmills, once well-kept and pumping their hearts out to provide water to farm families and livestock, have long been a fading symbol of the past. Their skeletons are memorials to an era of horse-power and hand plows.

At one time, almost every farm had one of these tools to harness the wind. Now, most of the windmills in the area are found on Amish or Mennonite farms, symbols of their belief and traditional way of life.

Edward Zoon of 3 Bullens Avenue, Wayne, N.J. 07470, recently wrote to Lancaster Farming and asked where he could get information on "the windmill towers" he saw while visiting Lancaster County over the Labor Day weekend.

Mr. Zoon, since you mentioned the fact that the windmills you saw were used for pumping water, I'll assume that's what you want it for.

When I checked with our local County Extension Agent, Max Smith, he didn't know who our local Amishmen and Mennonite farmers bought their windmills from. So he had me call Charles Hoober, a farm equipment dealer in Intercourse, Lancaster County.

Mr. Hoober said his equipment dealership didn't carry windmills. But he did know where most of the local farmers bought theirs.

He referred me to David

Ag leaders discuss drought aid

HARRISBURG — Officials of the Agriculture Department recently met with the leadership of legislative committees on Agriculture and Rural Affairs, and with representatives of the state's major farm organizations. These meetings were held to discuss possibilities for state action to provide assistance to farmers affected by the drought.

Many Pennsylvania farmers have suffered substantial economic losses due to the severe lack of rainfall.

"Many more face continued losses into the 1981 crop year. We are actively pursuing methods at the state level to assist Pennsylvania farmers who have suffered these losses," Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell said.

"In many ways, farmers face critical cash flow problems due to the seasonal and timely nature of farming operations. Farmers who lose crops due to this summer's drought may need assistance by next year's planting time, to prevent being forced out to business," Hallowell said.

He noted the meetings had been important in that the agricultural leaders had recognized the problems facing Pennsylvania farmers and had agreed to work together to seek assistance at the state level.

Discussion at the two meetings centered on possibilities for programs which would be conducted at the state level, over and above current federal programs.

"While the emergency programs of the USDA are important, most farmers are not eligible for insured loans at five percent interest. In many cases, farmers are able to save money, by applying for loans at their bank or other conventional source outside the USDA assistance program," Hallowell said.

"A program on the state level might provide assistance to drought-striken farmers by reimbursing them for a percentage of the actual losss. We don't need another lending agency and bureaucracy at the state level, but all segments of the farm community do want to see action which might lessen the economic blow from the drought," Hallowell said.

If you have a question you would like answered by the team from Valley Animal Hospital, send it to Ask the VMD, Box 366, Lititz, Pa. 17543. Questions will be kept anonymous on request.

A reader asks:

Could you please discuss some recommendations for the control of wool maggots?

Dr. Riegel comments:

Wool maggots, also known as blowfly strike, fleece worms, and Fligenlarvenkranheit, are caused by flies of the genus Phormis or genus Lucilia.

The flies lay eggs on an area of the sheeps body where the wool is wet or spoiled with feces, urine, wound exudates, or other body secretions.

The eggs hatch in 12 to 24 hours and develop into full grown larva in 3 to 6 days. These larva then feed on excretions from the skin which are produced by enzymes secreted by the maggots.

For the control of wool maggots, two regimes can be used. One is the elimination of the optimum place for the flies to lay their eggs, and second is the use of insecticides.

The most common area of the sheep to become spoiled is the breech, or buttocks area. Some of the things which cause this soiling are improperly docked tails, extra long wool (especially in ewes around lambing time), and some of the Australian breeds have wrinkles in the skin of the breech area.

What can be done to control these situations? Make sure the length of the tail is such that the end is just below the tip of the vulva when docking is done. Clipping breech wool just prior to lambing. And, in breeds where wrinkly skin in the breech area is a problem, elimiate these wrinkles by a surgical procedure.

In areas where wool maggots are a serious problem, the use of insecticides should be employed.

Apply approved insecticides in the breech region and over a strip 6 to 8 inches wide from rump to poll.

Consult your local veterinarian for the type of insecticide to use.

If, Mr. Zoon, you were looking at the windmills as a method for harnessing the wind to generate electricity, you may want to contact a Berks County business.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland recently found himself in the awkward position of sounding like he was against agricultural research. At least that part of it that deals with farm mechanization.

While he may have won some temporary support among farm labor unions and a few other folks, he has surely stirred up a hornet's nest in the farm machinery complex and among farmers themselves.

There is a line of reasoning quite prevalent in some places that says a lot of agriculture's ills can be blamed on bigness, and that bigness is the result of advances in mechanization.

If you buy that line of reasoning, then you must also select the proper time when mechanization advances must stop and the status quo must be maintained. For without advances in agricultural mechanization, most of us would be living on farms and we'd be doing most farm work by hand.

It's now realistic to say that research in the area of agricultural engineering, as it's done by the Department of Agriculture and the land grant college system, is not in the best interest of agriculture.

If you believe that, then you surely believe that all progress is bad and that things should be the way they used to be. But I have trouble deciding how things used to be because for me the good old days were filled with good old tractors, electric motors, windmills, and farm trucks.

I hated the hard hand labor of pulling weeds, stacking baled hay, pitching bundles, and picking corn. And those were the advanced days of agriculture compared with turn of the century farming when there was no farm power other then people, horses, and oxen. Or even further than that, when manpower did everything.

Look back at early 18th century agriculture and you see very little horsepower and a lot of hand work, and a nation's population devoted to food and fiber production. Even then the southern planters and other serious agriculturists were looking for better ways to handle their production.

The parade of agricultural inventions was endless and it continues even today. So an effort to justify an end to farm mechanization research, at least on the part of public institutions, is ridiculous.

We're the best fed nation in the world and it's done with only three percent of our population. And that's due in large part to agricultural research. Some of it is done by industry, some by the Department of Agriculture, some by the ag colleges, and a lot done by farmers themselves.

Maybe the lettuce pickers can now say that we need no more mechanization, thus insuring themselves a place in the industry. But is that really fair to the generations of Americans who follow?

What if the cotton pickers had said that 100 years ago?

Think what agriculture would be like if for some reason agricultural mechanization research had faltered a century ago. Would America still be able to feed its millions?

No doubt most of us would be out there trying to grow something to eat and we wouldn't enjoy the standard of living that we now have. It's true that mechanization has displaced millions of people in the last century, but all but a few have found equivalent jobs in other sectors of the economy. Many of those jobs have in turn led to other products and services that allow us all to live a better life.

Personally, I don't want to go back to the farm of the 1930s, nor do I think my grandchildren will someday want to farm the way it's done today. So I get a little irritated at anybody who wants to stand in the way of progress and invention. Without it, we're all going to go hungry someday. With it, it's still a nip and tuck battle over the next hundred years to see whether America feeds its own people and has anything left for the millions of foreigners who are already clamoring at our gates.

It would be possible to cut out publicly funded agricultural mechanization research and still make some progress, but it would be at a slower rate. That would mean disappearing farm jobs would vanish at a slower rate, but they would still vanish. It might also mean less productivity, higher food prices, and a myriad of other problems.

There's no question that America has developed the best agricultural system in the world. Our abilities combined with our political and economic systems and our natural advantages make American agriculture the dream of most other countries.

If you look at other industries in this country, it's not too hard to figure out that farming is about the only thing we do better than most of our foreign competitors. So why mess it up under the guise of saving some jobs for some farm workers?

The fact is that farm mechanization creates more jobs in industry, which has allowed the displaced workers to find new and usually better employment. It would be foolish to stop now in our quest for better planting and harvesting techniques, more efficient farm power, and improved materials handling systems.

Agricultural history is cluttered with mechanization milestones, going back as far as the invention of the horse collar and including the moldboard plow, the cotton gin, the grain reaper, the tractor, the corn picker, and the combine.

If properly encouraged and supported, agricultural research will continue to find new and better ways to solve farm mechanization problems. Admittedly, those inventions will displace some more farm labor.

As one who has labored in the fields doing the hand jobs for which there were no machines, I'm all for mechanization research in whatever form. The sooner it comes and the better it works, the happier I'll be.

I don't want to go back to milking cows by hand, shocking wheat and pitching manure.

Nor do I want to condemn future generations of farm folk to some of the awkard and wasteful techniques of today.

Lewisburg FmHA office to close this week

LEWISBURG — The Lewisburg county office of the Farmers Home Administration will be closed three days from October 29 to October 31 to permit the employees to attend the annual statewide FmHA meeting at York.

Michael R. Orendo, FmHA county supervisor said the office will reopen for regular business at 8 a.m., November 3.

Approximately 190 FmHA employees from all the county and district offices in Pennsylvania and from the state office in Harrisburg are expected at the state meeting.

State and national FmHA officials will evaluate the agency's services of the past year and review FmHA objectives, methods and techniques necessary to serve the ever-changing needs of rural areas in Pennsylvania.

County Supervisor Orendo said that FmHA, as the rural credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, attracts private capital to rural areas as well as makes direct loans to farmers, homeowners and small towns.

Order 2 dairymen to get $13.31

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Dairy farmers supplying milk plants regulated under the New York - New Jersey marketing orders during September will be paid on the basis of a uniform price of $13.31 per hundred pounds or 28.6 cents per quart.

Market Administrtor Thomas A. Wilson, who announced September's price, also said the uniform farm price was $13.01 per hundredweight in August 1980 and $12.51 per hundredweight in September. 1979.

The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

The seasonal incentive fund returned a total of $3,711,058.21 or $.450 per hundredweight to the dairy farmer's uniform price for September. This fund was generated by reducing the uniform price paid producers during the high production spring months.

The total amount of milk received from the 17,539 dairy farmers supplying the New York - New Jersey Marketing Area was 824,866,429 pounds during September 1980. This was almost 19.2 million pounds above last year. The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $110,608,973.85.

Wilson explained this included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers (handlers) utilized 394,220,574 pounds or 47.8 percent of the total amount of milk for Class I. The Class I milk is used for fluid products such as homogenized, flavored, low-test and skim milks. For September 1980, handlers paid $13.98 per hundredweight, or 30.1 cents per quart, for the milk used in Class 1 products compared with $13.12 a year ago.

The balance of the milk, 52.2 percent, was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream and yogurt. For this milk the handlers paid $12.13 per hundredweight.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For September 1980, a differential of 16.7 cents was applied to the price for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received within the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

Pa. Angus Assn. looks for 1981 queen

EAST BERLIN — The Pennsylvania Angus Association is looking for candidates for the title of 1981 Angus Queen, announced Helen F. Dixon.

To qualify for the title, she pointed out, the candidates must be between the ages of 15 and 19 and must be currently involved in raising Angus cattle, either breeding stock or steers. Daughters of Angus breeders, farm managers, or herdsmen also are eligible to compete.

To enter the contest, each entry must be sponsored by a member in good standing of the Pennsylvania Angus Association, Dixon stated. She added if a potential contestant needs help in locating a sponsor, the state association would help find one for her.

Other criteria for the contest include:

—only two entries are permitted to represent each county;

—the Queen must agree to be present at the Pennsylvania Angus Spring Sale, Angus Field Day, Pennsylvania State Farm Show, and wherever she is needed to promote Angus cattle in the state.

Entries for the contest will be accepted until November 15, 1980. Each contestant should submit an autobiography along with a black and white photograph to be used in news releases.

The 1981 Pennsylvania Angus Queen will receive a complete Western outfit along with a sash denoting her status, provided by the Ladies Auxiliary. At the conclusion of her reign, she will receive a trophy presented by Valleys Edge Farm.

Interested contestants should submit their entries to: Helen Dixon, Druck Valley Angus, R2 Box 176A, East Berlin, PA 17316. For more information, contact her at 717/292-5750.

State's fruit looks good, but corn and hay slump

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania production of apples, grapes, winter wheat and tobacco should all be above last year, based on October 1 conditions, but corn for grain, fall potatoes and all hay will show a decline, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

Corn for grain production is now forecast at 97.2 million bushels in the commonwealth, a decline of 16 percent from a year ago. Approximately 1,230,000 acres of corn are expected for harvest with an average yield of 79.0 bushels per acre.

The Pennsylvania winter wheat crop is now forecast at 9.5 million bushels, up 17 percent from 1979. The wheat crop was harvested from 250,000 acres with a yield of 38 bushels per acre. Soybeans for beans production is forecast at 2.6 million bushels, down 16 percent from last year's crop, with an estimated yield of 27.0 bushels per acre.

Sorghum for grain is estimated at 275,000 bushels in Pennsylvania, about one-half the size of the 1979 crop. An estimated 5000 acres of sorghum is expected for harvest with an average yield of 55.0 bushels per acre.

All hay production is forecast at 4.0 million tons, down eight percent from a year ago, with an indicated yield of 2.03 tons per acre.

Pennsylvania apple production, forecast at 570 million pounds, will be seven percent above last year's 535 million pounds. Grape production in the commonwealth is forecast at 60,000 tons, eight percent above the 55,500 tons produced in 1979.

Fall potato production is forecast to be 3.96 million hundredweight about two-thirds the crop size of last year. Potato acreage for harvest should be 22,000 acres, with a forecasted yield of 180 cwt. per acre. This compares to an average yield of 250 cwt. per acre in both 1978 and 1979.

Pennsylvania tobacco production is expected to total 22,750,000 pounds, an increase of 29 percent from last year's 17,696,000 pounds. Acreage for harvest is estimated at 13,000 acres with a forecasted yield of 1750 pounds per acre.

Pasture and range feed condition in Pennsylvania rated very poor at 58 percent, compared with good to excellent conditions reported at the same time last year.

On the national level, corn production is forecast at 6.47 billion bushels, down one percent from the September 1 forecast and 17 percent below the record 1979 crop.

Soybean production is forecast nationally at 1.76 billion bushels, down four percent from September 1, and 23 percent below last year's crop. Sorghum grain production is forecast at 547 million bushels, down 33 percent from the 1979 crop.

All U.S. hay production is forecast at 126 million tons, 13 percent below last year's hay crop.

U.S. commercial apple production is forecast at 8.32 billion pounds, three percent above last year's crop. Grape production, forecast at 5.07 million pounds, is two percent above the 1979 crop.

Delmarva bean growers meet Chinese delegation

SALISBURY — Maryland Soybean growers joined the American Soybean Association in Washington, D.C. to host a delegation of visiting agricultural officials from the People's Republic of China.

The PRC delegation was in the nation's capital late in September on the first leg of a visit of U.S. soybean and cotton production areas. The visit to the United States was in response to a recent trade mission to the PRC by ASA leaders.

Maryland soybean producers, William S. Bradley of Salisbury, Henry Spies Jr. of Cordova, Leon Schmick of Preston and Milton Malkus Jr. of Cambridge, met for dinner with the delegation of 15 Chinese agricultural officials headed by the Vice Minister of the State Agricultural Commission of the Peking Government. U.S. Senator Thad Cochran, Representative G. V. "Sonny" Montgomery and Representative David Bowen's agricultural committee staff aid also joined the group for dinner. Both congressmen indicated America's eagerness and ability to supply the potentially vast Chinese market with additional soybean and cotton sales

"We think there is tremendous potential for increased soybean sales to China," says Maryland soybean board chairman, Leon Schmick. "This year China stepped up purchases of U.S. soybeans to cover one million metric tons. That's up from 850,000 tons in 1979 which was a ten-fold increase over the 85,000 tons China purchased in 1978.

"With a quarter of the world's population to feed and the Chinese government's commitment to improving diets by providing more meat, we feel confident that China will develop into one of our major markets for soybeans," says Schmick.

He added that in coming months soybean growers will be investing a portion of their grower investment checkoff funds in market development activities to help increase soybean sales to the PRC.

A strong demand for bull calves highlighted Stonen Farm's first sale Sept. 27 at Arkport, N.Y.

Local support by breeders was matched by Pennsylvania buyers and buyers from nine other states and Canada to keep prices consistent throughout the sale which grossed $104,375 for a sale average of $2026 on the 51 lots offered by Stonen Farm and guest consignor Marshall Farms of Port Byron, N.Y.

The highest selling lot was GWH Miss Laddie 4443, a March 1974 daughter of ABHY Anxiety Lad 22A bred to Justification, and her 75J heifer calf, SF Miss Banner 75J M40, going to Ace Polled Herefords, Millbrook, N.Y. for $6200.

A half transplant interest is a LS Beau Visitor 1-30 daughter was sold to Herb Marshall, Port Byron, N.Y. for $5,000.

The third highest selling offering was a cow-calf pair that totaled $4750 with Scotchwater Farm, Clarence, N.Y. paying $2,250 for Klondike Vicki 357G, a Finch N30 daughter, and Mont-Vue Farms, Niota, Tenn. paying $2,500 for her 75J heifer calf.

A feature of the sale that attracted a good deal of attention was the option offered buyers to leave their bull calves at Stonen Farm for participation in its third on-farm bull test. Several buyers elected to take advantage of this option including Home Acres, Perry, N.Y. buyer of the high selling bull calf, SF Sundance Rock M57 out of Wild Cat Sundance 7K for $2000.

The 15 bull calves averaged $780. Stonen Farm bulls and bull calves have sold well at private treaty and at consignment sale and this acceptance by breeders was evident by the demand at the sale.

Volume buyers were William and Mark Kohlenberg of Hornell, N.Y. who purchased 11 head; Si-Jo Farm (Joe Lewis) of Pulaski, N.Y. who purchased eight head; and Augustine Brothers of Skippack, Pa., Robert H. Card of McGraw, N.Y. and Woodbury Stock Farm of Jasper, N.Y. who each purchased five head.

Pennsylvania buyers in addition to the Augustine Brothers were James Hauser of Walnutport, Jane Hafer of Williamsport, Harold Wright of Coudersport, Richard Francola of Danville and Wendell Swartz of Starrucca.

Jim Birdwell of Oklahoma was auctioneer.

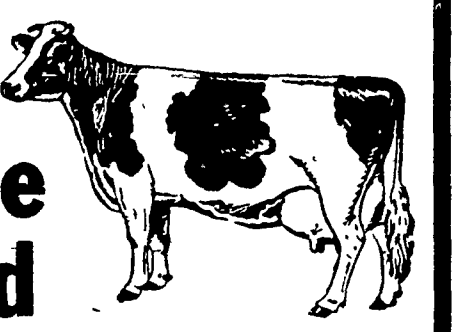
New Holland Sales Stables Annual Dairy Cow Show & Sale



It's Show Time In New Holland

Wednesday, October 29 - New Holland, PA

10 miles east of Lancaster, Pa. on Rt. 23

250 Selected Holsteins Sell

Show - 9:00 a.m. Sale - 11:00 a.m. Show Cows Sell - 12:00 noon

This sale will feature some of the better Holstein cows selling for type and production. Here is an opportunity to buy quality cows with good udders from some of the better herds in the Eastern U.S. and Canada. Many fresh cows and springs for fall milk.

Our consignors spend a lot of time and effort to get top cows for this special show and sale. If you're looking for the best, don't miss this sale.

In the past years, some of the most exceptional breeders have put a top on their herd from this special sale. Many registered cows with high classification and full pedigrees selling.

See them judged at 9:00 a.m. by a prominent Holstein judge. Classes to be judged are as follows:

All cattle tested for interstate shipment.

Checker™ Gilts

The all important other half

Half your income potential comes from the gilts you farrow. That's why Checker™ Gilts are bred to lower your feed costs and at the same time increase your pork production. They're bred to farrow big litters of fast gaining market hogs.

Each Checker Gilt is raised under one of the industry's most comprehensive health programs.

Kleen Leen health measures include

- Raising all Checker Gilts in isolation to prevent outside contamination.
- Slaughter checking all production herds at least three times a year.
- Vaccinating every production herd for Leptospirosis and Erysipelas, and validating them Brucellosis free.
- Checker Gilts are delivered to you in a clean, sanitized truck.

Kleen Leen's unequaled health program

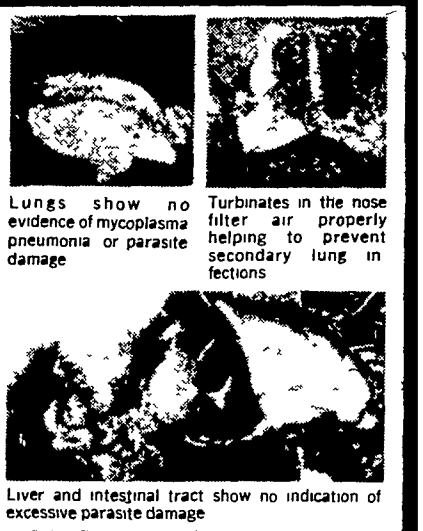
Every effort is made to insure the good health of the Kleen Leen breeding stock arriving on your farm. Here are some of the steps Kleen Leen takes:

- Artificial insemination is used to introduce new bloodlines into the Kleen Leen program.
- Production herds are kept as isolated as possible to prevent contamination from outside sources.
- Each production herd undergoes pre and post slaughter examination at least three times a year.
- The breeding stock you receive arrives on your farm in a clean, sanitized truck.

The Kleen Leen Health Warranty

"All Kleen Leen stock is delivered free of Lice, Swine Dysentery, Infectious Atrophic Rhinitis and Mycoplasma Pneumonia."

Inside a Kleen Leen hog



Lungs show no evidence of mycoplasma pneumonia or parasite damage

Turbinates in the nose filter air properly helping to prevent secondary lung infections

Liver and intestinal tract show no indication of excessive parasite damage

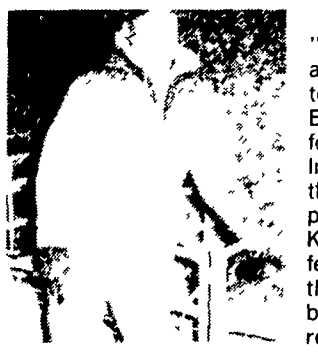
Some comments from hog producers who bought Checker Gilts

Richard Roeth and son Jeff
Troy, Ohio

Richard Roeth was running about 80 sows He sold out, cleaned up and repopulated with Kleen Leen 2 groups of 25 and 1 group of 30, plus 4 Blackline Boars Since then he has bought nothing but Kleen Leen boars and gilts Richard says "I feel that health genetic improvement and the availability of gilts and boars through the Purina Dealer are the best reasons to buy Kleen Leen"

Ron DeBruin
Leighton, Iowa

I had good length in my hogs at home but wanted to increase my quality of meat type hogs faster So I bought Kleen Leen boars and gilts for that reason (Kleen Leen) animals showed good bone and muscle structure on delivery and have continued to develop well"



Glenn DeVries
Gowrie, Iowa

" when Landrace becam available, I bought 14 of the to breed with my Checker Boars Talk about pe formance! We farrowed 14 live and healthy pigs fro those 14 gilts I'm one happ pork producer who is sold o Kleen Leen and the Purin feeding program Let me s thank you for making such breeding program available recommend Kleen Leen everyone"
